The Young Society Burglar in a Box.

How He Worked His Way into River side's Best Society,

Young Lady There, and Lived Like a Blood, all on the Proces

Engaged to an Estimable

Safe of the Laguna Hotel, and Was Caught.

W. W. Helm, the sneak-thief, who is charged with having committed grand lar-ceny, by taking $50 from the safe of Insley's Hotel, at Laguna Beach, last week, was brought before Justice Taney yesterday morning for examination. Helm is the young man who was captured at Riverside by Detective Carberry last week. At the time of his capture he was paviag a visit to his fiance, who is one of the reigning belles of Riverside, but whose name is withheld tor obvious reasons. Helm came to the coast some time ago, and, having by some means obtained a number of letters of introduction to some of the prominent and wealthy fami-lies in this county, moved in the best society, spending his money like a prince. Helm was fond of living around at the various watering-places, and it has since been remarked that from the first day of Helm was fond of living around at the various watering-places, and it has since been remarked that from the first day of his arrival at either of these towns petty thefts were committed. Some time in the early-part of July Helm went to Laguna Beach, and, for several days, lived in a tent on the beach, taking his meals in the hotel. Getting tired of this, he finally moved into the hotel, and lived there altogether.

Here he spent considerable money and lived rather high. The landlord, George T. Insley, finally came to the conclusion that it was about time for Helm to pay up part of his hotel bill, and so intimated to that young man. But to the landlord's surprise Helm told him he had spent all his money, and Mr. Insley would have to wait until he could get a remittance from home. He assured Mr. Insley that he was entirely without means, but was expecting some every day. This was on Monday evening. On Tuesday morning Helm gave Insley a check on the First National Bank of Riverside for $15.70, the amount of his bill, and then went out and was seen no more until his capture. It was then that the discovery was made that during the night the safe had been opened and a pocketbook containing $50 and two railroad tickets had been abstracted therefrom. Suspicion at once fell on Helm, and Mr. Insley enlisted the services of A. J. Lacas, the manager of the Pacific Coast Detective Bureau, who, sending out Mr. Carberry to work up the case, had the man captured as stated. Helm, finding himself in the hands of the officers, broke down and confessed that he had taken the money, and also that he had committed other thoffs at the various watering-places in this county. He was at once taken before Justice Freeman at Santa Ann, where he pleaded guilty and was committed for trial.

Upon being brought to the County Jail, however, Helm's attorney managed to get him out on a writ of habeas corpus, which was granted on the grounds that no evidence had been heard in the case. But after taking so much trouble to insure his capture, Mr. In

GEORGE T. INSLEY, sworn: I reside at Laguna Beach, and am the landlord of the hotel there. I know the defendant. He came to my house sonie time ago. He was fond of talking about the money he had, and sat around a great deal in the office of the hotel. I have a safe in the office, and am in the habit of keeping valuables belonging to my boarders in it. No other person but my partner and myself-knows the combination. It was written down on a card, and this card was lost some time ago. Mr. Sweatt gave me a purse to put in the safe, and I opened it and found it contained two $20 gold pieces, one $5 gold piece and a $5 bill. There were also two railroad tickets in the purse. I put the purse in the safe, and locked it, as is my the landlord of the hotel there. I know the contained two $30 gold pieces one $5 gold piece and a $5 bill. There were also two railroad tickets in the purse. I put the purse in the safe, and locked it, as is my usual custom. That same day I asked he had no money, and gave me a check on the Riverside bank. Thinking the check was no good, I telegraphed there, and found that he had no funds in the bank. The next morning Helm was gone, and so was the pocketbook. I then suspected Helm of the theft, and had him pursued and captured. When I went up to Riverside to see him I found him in jail, and he confessed that he had taken the money and spent it. He said he was sorry, but there was no one but himself to blame for the trouble. Cross-examined: I have generally a great many guests in the house, and on that day there might have been any number there from twenty-five to fifty, I cannot state exactly. There were a number of guests in the office on that day. I always lock the safe when I put anything in it or take anything out. I put the purse in there and did not see it again. There might have been several persons in the room when I put the purse away, but when I put the cash away at night I always wait until the office is empty. I suspected that Helm had taken the money, as I had been informed by other parties that he was a thief.

Here a tilt occurred between the counsel for the defense and the witness as to whether witness should be compelled to state who these parties were, which was decided in favor of the witness, and the ourt adjourned until 2 p.m.

Mr. Insley then continued: I don't know whether defendant had the combination or not. If he did he did not tell me he had.

G. E. FIELEMAN.

Sworn: I reside at Santa Ana and am Justice of the Peace there.

sworn: I reside at Santa Ana and am Jus-tice of the Peace there. I have seen the prisoner twice before. He was brought be-fore me charged with having committed a burghary, and pleaded guilty. He was brought before me by an officer, but there was no examination, and I committed him. Counsel for the defense here made a mo-tion to strike out this testimony, on the ground that the records of the court would be the best evidence. The motion was over-ruled.

sworn: I reside in Santa Ana and ain a constable. I know the prisoner and have had two or three conversations with him. In one of these conversations he told me he was reading in the office of the hotel and had tilted his chair back against the door of the safe. In getting up out of the chair he had caught its back under the handle of the door and the safe came open. Seeing the purse there he had taken it. He also made the same confession before Judge Freeman. I arrested him at Riverside and scarched him there. He toldy me he had two railroad tickets that were in the purse, but had used one to go from Santa Ana to Los Angeles, and tried to use the other from Los Angeles to Riverside. The conductor took that one up and he had then paid his fare to Riverside.

c. H. SWEATT, sworn: I reside at Riverside, but was at Laguna Beach on August 13th. On the 22d of August I went to the bath-house, but be-C. H. SWEATT, sworn: I reside at Riverside, but was at Laguna Beach on August 13th. On the 23d of August I went to the bath-house, but before leaving the hote! I gave the landlord my purse containing $50 and two railroad tickets for him to keep for me. I saw him put the purse in the safe and close the door.
I did not call for it again until the next afternoon, and it was then discovered that some person had taken it. One of the $5 gold pieces had several black spots on it, as though some one had tested it with acid. I saw the defendent open the safe once. It was in the evening when I was in the office reading. One of the chambermaids was there talking to defendent, and I heard him ask her if she thought he could not open the safe. She said she didn't think he could, and then I heard the combination turn and in a moment after saw the safe open. I could not swear it was locked before he opened it, but I heard the combination turn.
Cross-examined: I have never lost anything at that hotel before. It was in the morning that I handed the purse to the I handlord. I heard him testify that it was in the afternoon, but he is mistaken. I am the complaining witness in this case. I swore that Helm had taken the purse, because he had so confessed. I was sitting in such a position that I could easily see when Helm opened the safe. I heard the combination turn and saw him with the door of the safe in his hand. I have not seen the purse since I handed it to Mr.
Insiey.

Eugene Carberry, sworn: I reside in Los Angeles. In coming from Santa Ana to Los Angeles I saw defendant hand the conductor a railroad ticket, No. 244, dated August 12th. I have had no conversation with defendant. I saw him try to pass ticket No. 1925, also dated August 12th, on a conductor on the road between here and Riverside. The conductor was the proper

"Drunk," promptly responded Davy. Capt. Tyler was asked if he had ever seen the prisoner before. The Captain said he really could not tell, but if Davy would only wash up he might be able to identify him; as he appeared in the dock, though, he would be obliged to give it up.

HELD TO ANSWER.

Two Boys Who Have Gone to the Bad Early. On the 26th of August the residence of B. Bagnall, 38 Ann street, was burglarized, between the hours of 3 and 4 a.m. Officer Gus Smith was given the case to work up, and succeeded in arresting two young men named George Williams and Fred Forrest. Williams was captured at San Foundation told the officer that he knew of the robbery, Williams was captured at San Fedro, and told the officer that he knew of the robbery, and had received some of the boodle, which consisted of $115 in gold, $2 or $3 in silver and a silver watch. The boys sold the watch to an expressman for $10, bought some clothes with part of the money and enjoyed the use of the balance. The watch was recovered and identified by Mr. Bagnalb. The case of the young burglars came up before Justice Austin yesterday, and a very strong case was made out against them. It was proven that Williams has done no work and that Forrest has been his companion constantly. No account was given by them as to where they got the money, and Williams' partial confession, together with general bad character, militated strongly against them.

Justice Austin held the defendants to answer the charge of burglary, with bail fixed at $1000 each.

THAT BANJO,

And the Mournful Tune It Plays for J. C. Burns went to Wells Fargo's office some time ago, and impersonating L. L. E. Jones, managed to get a vilise and a banjo, which property was not his own, at least a portion of it. The testimony in the case before Justice Austin yesterday, showed that Burns and Jones checked their baggage together, and that Burns, knowing the property, was able to describe it and lead the express company to believe it was his. Jones testified that he had not authorized Burns to sign for him nor did he give him the right to get the baggage.

After the case had got fairly started it was found necessary to dismiss the com-plaint and draw a new one, as the amount stated in the original was over that bringing it within the jurisdiction of the Justice Court. The testimony of an expert proved that the banjo and contents of the valiss were worth $55, and a trial on the new com-plaint brought will come off on September braced in its membership not only well-known "crooks," and also citizens previously supposed to be honest and respectable, but high officers of the Government as well. Its ramifications were extensive, its organization complete, its acts fold, defiant and absolutely lawless. It was a crime second in enormity only to the Great Rebellion itself; and to suppress it and break up the gigantic conspiracy required the utmost efforts of the Government. Indeed, at times it seemed as though the Government would fail in its difficult task. In order to succeed, and convict the principal conspirators, thieves and scoundrels, it was forced to resort to the well-known legal expedient of ptting criminals against criminals. It purchased the testimony of some members of the gang to be used against the others, by promising the traitors immunity from criminal prosecution for turning State's evidence.

The chapter which we present below is that portion of the official history of the indictment of 'the crooked-whisky firm of Golson & Eastman, of Chicago, composed of William S. Golson and Francis A. Eastman. The latter hypocrite and pretender is at present editor of a paper called the Loss Angeles Tribune. How Coal-Laden Ships Will Be Discharged at the New Bunkers.

[San Diego Sun.]

The piling is being prepared at the creosote works, and as soon as it is ready and the needed lumber arrives, the new coal bunkers will be built on the Santa Fé wharf. "We shall be prepared when those bunkers are finished," said Mr. Hinde, commercial manager of the Santa Fé. "to ship coal to Los Angeles and ether points in Southern California, and deliver it at lower rates than they can secure from any other source. The coal-laden ships will lay alongside our wharf here and discharge their cargoes into cars, which will be drawn up an incline to a level with the top of the bunkers. Here they will be dumped, and then the coal will be ready for shipment to the interior. When we want to load a coal train we have only to run the cars under the bunkers, pull out a great slide in each of the bins, and presto, the car beneath is filled and ready to be forwarded to any point on the line of the railroad. Of course when our new line is completed by the way of Oceanside we shall be able to supply Los Angeles with coal much cheaper than it can be lightered ashore at Wilmington and reshipped to that city."

Mr. Hinde, who is also one of the directors of the Spreckels Brothers' Commercial Company, said that the plans for the new warehouse were about ready and the work of construction would soon begin. There are already six ships on the way to this port from Europe whose cargoes will be placed in the warehouse.

Monica—The Taily-Ho Victims Ite-covering—Engagements and Mar-riages—Society Brieflets.

The week just past has been of some interest in social circles. The tennis tournament at Santa Monica was a decidedly swell affair. The shocking accident at the same pretty seaside resort, whereby over a dozen prominent society people were more or less seriously injured, interferred, however, with much of the anticipated gayety.

complete recovery.

The worst of the pain of broken bones is over for the beloved General, the young men of the party are almost themselves again, with the exception of Lieut. Dapay, and the ladies, even Miss Kate Stoneman, the severest sufferer, are out of any apprehension of further danger. The beautiful horses, though notoriously "a vain thing for safety," are only second in point of interest and are all promised a complete rehabilitation by their physician in ordinary, Los Angeles veterinary.

Inspired by the example of Cinderella, two bright young girls of this city, Misses Bailhache and King, tried their prentice hand on a play solely for home representation. The play, however, scorning the frivolties of fairy-land, dealt instead with the severer virtues and the manners of the time of Julius Casar. It was acceptably acted by a group of young friends of the playwrights, at the home of Miss King, on Fourth street, on Tuesday night last. Real merit was shown both in the construction and rendition of the embryo drama.

Suffice it to imagine a liberal representation of wit, beauty-youthful and mature—fashion, breeding and muscle of Southern California to be gathered at the tennis court, in the hotel parlors and in private cottages, or dispersed in gayly colored groups on the beach, and one may base the true picture of the first bournament of the Southern California Tennis Association.

That "Purp."

Adams and Robinson, who were arrested on Friday night last when attempting to steal a bull dog, came up for trial yesterday afternoon before Justice Austin.

They admitted climbing over the back fence of the Pioneer stables, on Requina street, and taking the dog, though one of the men said he believed the dog for over a year previous to his taking up his residence in San Diego. The owner of the pup said he had never given it away and that he valued it at $100. Justice Austin found both men guilty and fined them $30 each.

Their Eyes Are On Us. E. E. Crandall, the hardware merchant, who returned yesterday morning from an extended trip East, says he never saw such extended trip East, says he never saw such a furore as exits there over California. In Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Zanesville, Louisville—all along the line, he found it the same. People looking over the hotel register, and finding that he halled from California, would send up their cards and request an interview with him about this State. Mr. Crandall says he thinks that 400,000 people will pour into Southern California this winter.

Almost a Collision. What came near being another serious street car accident occurred on the covner of Main and Spring streets yesterday morning. A horse attached to a wagon belonging to the Los Angeles Fish Company ran car hove in sight and a collision seemed inevitable, as the wagon was headed directly for the car. A young man pluckily ran out and stopped the frightened animal just in Paper Carnival.

It will be the arst of the kind ever held in Southern California and will doubtless awaken as much interest as did the magnificent carnival held in San Francisco a year or two since. The ladies of the Church of the Unity have the reputa-tion of doing in the best possible style whatever they undertake, and therefor, a sensation may be expected.

PACIFIC LAND IMPROVEMENT CO., Room 21, Wilson Block, Los Angeles. FACTS ABOUT FULLERTON.

ADVANTAGES.

Fullerton has the most productive country tributary to it of any new town site laid out in Southern California: the country around is noted for its feetile soil and the great abundance of watch, which, as is well known, is the most copious supply in Southern California. Uranges grow to the greatest perfection. The famous Glinan ranch adjoins the townsite of Fullerton. The Gliman place is the "show" wainut grove in the State, visitors being taken there from all parts of the country and shown it as a sample of what can be done in the way of having a perfect wainut grove. Oranges and limes from this section are noted throughout the State as being the fluest produced anywhere, and commanding the top market price. Land in the vicinity of Fullerton is still at a very reasonable figure, as the country is comparatively little known, being at present out of the way of the general lines of travel. With the advent of the Santa Fe Italiroad, which, is expected within ninety days, property will advance very materially, as it will then first be latered than the skelling productive land at lower prices than that asked for in and about Pasadena.

OSTRICHES.

The original and largest ostrich farm is only one mile from the tows, and is a great source of interest to tourists. One hundred ostriches may be counted.

COMMONWEALTH AVENUE

runs through the center of the town, one hundred feet wide and ten miles long. This will be one of the finest avenues in the Southern country. Lined with umbrageous shadetrees, and the soil is naturally adopted to roadmaking, packing as hard as asphalt, are never dusty or muddy.

readily at $1000 per acre within six montas from date.

IMPROVEMENTS IN THE TOWN OF FULLERTON. A $25,000 hotel is now in course of erection and will be finished within ninety days; two other $10,000 brick buildings are now contracted for and will be finished within the same time. A bank with $100,001 capital is incorporated, and will put up a $15,000 pressed brick building immediate in $15,000 pressed brick building immediate of construction and many lots have been sold conditionally upon brick buildings being erected thereon immediately.

A cement sidewalk six feet wide is now being laid upon all the principal streets; water piped in heavy iron pipes and under good pressure through the streets.

The soil is a fine sandy loam which neitherets muddy nor dusty. gets muddy nor dusty.

LIMATE.

Fullerton being but eight miles from the ocean, gets the sea breeze much sooner than towns on the other side of the foothill, thus producing a lower temperature in summer, and at the same time the proximity to the ocean causes, a more equal and warmer temperature in winter.

Fullerton has the best soil, the best water, she bost climate, the largest and most productive territory tributary to it, the best railroad facilities, and there is more each being expended in it on permaneut improvements than one of the productive territory in the southern California.

It is daily growing louder, too, and will thunder far more loudly still before the first of October. Our fertile lands, vast water volume, and matchless citrus fruits are the magnets of attraction. THE Hartford Courant is disposed to eccept the theory of the New York Sun that the course of the Administration as regards the offices, is shaped with reference to the effect of its policy upon the chances of renomination; thus, in thoroughly Democratic States, like Maryland, Georgia and Indiana, where the Mugwumps are inconspicuous, the removals have been sweeping, while in States like Massachusetts, where deference has to be paid to Mugwump sentiment, a more cautious policy is adopted. As far as Connecticut is concerned, the Courant bears witness that "There has m, since the days of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Spratt, been a cleaner sweep than that in this State.

Even today, when the greatness of imperial Rome is but a memory, there is in profane history no story of ancient peoples that holds the fascination for the student that does the history of Rome. The boldness of Roman aggression astonishes us. The courage and determination which she evinced in her grasp after universal dominion our admiration. The history of Rome is the history of stupendous enterprise, of marching and aggressive civilization; of world-wide power. It such a story of imperial progress as the world had never before witnessed. Its work was the gradual fusion of all the nations of the earth

The whole world after a time becam Roman, and the will of the first Roman emperor was the law of the civilized universe.

The more Roman history is studied the more fully is the intelligent scholar convinced that underlying everything people there must have been some divine purpose which was shaping its destinies to some grand end. It is an interesting and suggestive fact that when the splendor and power of Rome had reached its culmination, and the first Roman emperor was seated upon the throne of the Cæsars, Christianity was born. Glancing at Roman history from that standpoint in time, it is not difficult to trace the underlying meaning of the great work of preparation

With first the emperor the world had but one ruler. The peoples whose interests before had been separate and inde-pendent, whose feeble labors had been only for their own aggrandizement and who had toiled apart in their barbaric obscurity, were now all linked together, all taking pride in Roman power and Roman progress.

At this opportune moment, when the world was preëminently ready, the new era of Christianity was ushered in. Can any one question that in this universal dominion there was a wise purpose and an end to be accomplished even the beginning of a new and better era for the race? Looking at events in this light, we may naturally conclude that had Rome never existed, and Roman conquests never been attained, free and Christian America would have been an impossible factor of the world's civilization That ancient Rome, whose plenitude of power astonishes us, whose tyrannical hand was upon everything that opposed her, did more to pave the way for universal advancement and This day's Times—another 16-page for the existence of free government paper—contains, as the reader will find and the spread of Christianity than all

Our civil war and the results springing out of it were the moulding hand of Providence, which is shall crown republican America with the splendor of freedom, and a glory and greatness more enduring than ever belonged to imperial Rome.

THE SAUNTERER.

I really feel as if I might with propriety put on metropolitan airs, as a denizen of this big and growing city, when I look about me and see the number of three and fourstory blocks that have been erected, or are in the process of erection, in the business parts of town. Los Angeles would not cognize her former self if she could stand up beside the wraith of her past as she was even six years ago. Why, she is now no up beside the wraith of her past as she was even six years ago. Why, she is now no more what she was then than a diminutive and demure little Quaker maiden is like the brilliant and stately queen of fashion. The little one-story frame business houses have bern displaced by modern villas and given place to majestic granite-trimmed bricks. The small, lox-like cottages have been displaced by modern villas and elegant mansions. The long, dim line of, street lamps have hidden their dimished heads in the glare of electric lights. The rough cobblestone pavements are supplanted by miles of artificial stone walks. And how then number of street-ear lines has been multiplied! How rich we are in cable and electric roads. How the-city has climbed the hills and dotted them over with palatial residences. How it has strethed itself out over the plains to sun itself in their brightness of the sea. How it has extended its steam railroads, and received its competing line from across the continent. How it has linked itself with bands of steel to other towns and cities lying upon the coast. How it has sown the seeds for numberless new settlements. How it has bridged rivers and leveled mighty hills, and filled up valleys. What numberless hotels it has reared. How many churches and colleges it has built! Who would know this loyely city with its an interesting letter on presidential preferences in California; and "John "English Outdoor Life" describes what it purports to. "The Bay City" is a and "A Financial Portrait" depicts many churches and colleges it has built!

Who would know this lovely city with its northern wall of mighty mountains, its homedotted hills and its busy streets, that looked upon it now for the first time for a decade of years? Then it lay asleep in the sunshine, dreaming in Rip Van Winkle dullness, unconscious of the future, whose charm was then but just breaking above it. Then the torpor of the unprogressive past was upon it, and the angel of progress stood viewing it with folded wings.

But now that she is awake, how beautiful is "the City of the Angels!" The future whispers to her of coming glory, and along the pathway of iron rails we catch the ceaseless sound of the tread of advancing thousands. The East is stretching out her hands to us, begging us to make room for her people within our gates, and the tide of empire is breaking mightily upon our shores, beating back barbarianism and bringing to us the wealth and splendor of the older East. Beautiful Los Angeles! The glowing star of the sunset west!

I met a number of juvenile cyclers out I met a number of juvenile cyclers out the other evening as I was tramping along the streets of the city. The little misses, in their bright dresses, looked like dainty butterflies, and their happy laughter rang out, sweet as the song of birds. One pretty little maiden, of perhaps 9 summers, handled her wheel like a veteran, and sent it spinning along in advance of the boy cyclers, who did their best to pass her. "My!" exclaimed one gallant little chap, "I just think she has got wings somewhere."

A newly-imported son of the Flowery Kingdom took a seat on the dummy of one of our cable cars the other day as it stood at the station at Spring street, waiting the signal for starting. He evidently was laboring under the inpression that the car was waiting for horses. But when it started, without any visible means of locomotion, the almond-eyed heathen's oblique gaze was one of terrified astonishment. "No horsee, no mulee, no noneting. 'Melican debbil, he pushee!" and he gave a frightened leap into the street, evidently grateful to the spirits of his ancestors for his successful escape. of our cable cars the other day as it stood Boyce—have made much feeble fuss, at different periods in the past, about The Times, its editors, editing, et cetera; to all of which you appear to have been generally and brutally indifferent.

Well, let me say that the Tribune gang have not had such aimighty big success in the editing business themselves that they can afford to lift up very high or blow very loud the horn of their rejoicing.

Take, for instance, Payne. He edited a photograph gallery once, I believe, and subsequently applied for the job of editing the city finances, but the people, "by a large majority," would not have him; they refused to put the public funds into his hands.

Then there is Eastman. He, it seems, was engaged for a period of eighteen months or so in the business of editing crooked whisky, until finally Uncle Sam, the great managing editor, himself stepped in and discharged Mr. Eastman, closing up his peculiar "editorial" shop and referring his case to the United States Grand Jury for the Northern District of Illinois. The outcome of the examination into Mr. Eastman's style of editing crooked whisky was described in your paper some weeks ago. [And will be found set out more at length in other columns of this issue.—Ed.]

Then there is Mr. Boyce. He, too, is a great editor. They say he was once engaged in the business of editing school boards (not books) and Legislatures. Later on he tried his hand at editing political conventions, city, county, district and State. I have never heard that he succeeded preeminently in any of these efforts. Subsequently, I am told, he wanted to try his 'prentice hand on 'The Times, but soon landed' outside the sanctum. Still later he tried to be managing editor of a bank, but the prudent stockholders, in the most brutal and unfeeling manner, objected, and the financial sanctum now knows him no more forever. And now this great editor is, I believe, engaged in the bussiness of editing real estate and that truly remarkable and highly virtuous sheet, the Los Angeles Tribune. At least the latter frequen

WOODLAND, Sept. 3.—[By the Associated Press.] A shooting affair took place on the street this evening which came near Pendergast. B. Harnish, one of the proprietors of the Sacramento Valley mills, of this city, had been having a difficulty recently with his creditors, and has felt aggreed over certain legal decisions rendered by Justice of the Peace Ruggles. When Harnish and Ruggles met a dispute arose, and Judge Ruggles defended him-self by striking Harnish with a cane as the latter attempted to draw a pistol. They grappled and fell, Ruggles on top. At this moment Pendergast attempted to pa them, when Harnish fired. As Harnish bad engaged in a fight with ex-Judge Bosh over a matter of similar import, the pistod shot attracted a large crowd, and when it was intimated that Pendegast was shot intense excitement prevailed and many threats were indulged in by the crowd, nor could they be fully quieted until the supposed injured man was brought out of Elston's drug store and declared himself that his injuries were sight. But a short time before the shooting Harnish told Officer Powers that Ruggles had called him a liar and he intended to "fix him," and "knock him sixteen feet," and other similar expressions, and asked the officer if he was watching him. When Harnish was taken to jail he expressed himself as a much abused man, and said that the shooting was an act of self-defense. After being locked up, Harnish was told that he had shot the Deputy Sheriff, and expressed great surprise and regret for the act, but did not attempt to deny that he intended the shot for Ruggles.

Among the important matters under discussion today was the late quarantine declared by the Live Stock Sanitary, Commission of the Territory against the Republic of Mexico, where no precautionary measures whatever have been taken to guard against the importation from Europe or the Eastern States of the dreaded pleuro-pneumonia, and which is now-believed to exist in some portions of Mexico. While the action of the Veterinary Sanitary Board in the matter must necessarily work inconvenience to some individuals, the meeting heartily indorsed the measure as on the whole more wise and just, particularly inasmuch as a like quarantine exists against most of the States of our own government. Gov. Zulick's action in his efforts to benefit the Territory was indorsed.

The man who crosses his legs in the horse-cars deserves the attention of the authorities—the social authorities at least. Ladies hold back their dresses and try to walk around him without having to wipe his muddy boots with their skirts, while the men who are enough of high steppers walk over him. He is a troublesome person. There are times when a man can indulge in the luxury of crossing his legs in a horse-car, but under ordinary circumstances the place for both of a gentleman's feet is on the floor. The fact that well-bred persons sometimes offend in this matter out of forgetfulness is no excuse for them or others.

THAT DEAL.

Result of the Baltimore and Ohio Sale.

The New York Stock Market Goes Up Amid Wild Excitement.

Opinions of Prominent Operators or the Effects of the Deal.

Ivania Road Now Said to Have no Int est in the Contract-Foreign Markets Excited-What is Said Abroad

By Telegraph to The Times.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—[By the Associated Press.] Speaking of the Baltimore and ohlo negotiations, one of the heaviest oper-ators on the street, after the close of the stock market, said: "There is no benefit to be gained from the settlement, except that which might accrue to the creditors of the Baltimore and Onio. They are essentially the same parties who have taken the pre-ferred stocks and bonds, and it is simply a matter of bonding the floating debt. This may have saved the Baltimore and Ohlo from going into a receiver's hands on account of the floating debt. but that is all that has been done. Rates cannot be ad-vanced 100 per cent., as was the case when the West Shore settlement was made. As far as the telegraph settlement is concerned that is further away now than ever. The Baltimore and Ohio is now in strong hands and will be run in conjunction with the Pennsylvania and Reading for the benefit of the latter, and if Gould buys the telegraph system it will be at the syndicate's terms, and there may be a fight of years before the consolidation can be made."

THE CABLE COMPANIES.

Vice President De Castro of the Comme THE CABLE COMPANIES.

Vice President De Castro of the Commercial Cable Company was averse to talking on the matter. He said that Mr. Mackay was still in San Francisco and had no intention of coming to this city for some time. Negotiations with Gould had not been renewed, but that did not affect the land lines. Even though Gould should buy the Baltimore and Ohio telegraph system, the position of the cable company would not be weakened. It, instead, would be materially strengthened, as it would be materially strengthened, as it would then be the only opposition. The stories to the effect that Mackay had signified a willingness to raise able rates to 50 or 60 cents per word, provided Gould furnished the money to pay the rebate guaranteed by Mackay, he pronounced false. One reason for holding to the 40-cent rate was, that if that rate was established no new competition could be organized and live, while with a 60-cent rate it is probable that a new cable would be laid at once and a new war inaugurated.

J. Pierrepont Morgan said that the preliminary contract signed yesterday was the only one necessary-and that no other would be drawn up. He said that it was the intention to sell both the telegraph and sleeping car plants and franchises as soon as it could be favorably accomplished.

EFFECT ON THE STOCK MARKET.

EFFECT ON THE STOCK MARKET.

The developments published this morning regarding the Baltimore and Ohio negotiaregarding the Battimore and Ohlo negotia-tions were a complete surprise to operators in the stock market, but they all formed the decision to boom everything on the list. At the opening of the exchange prices moved up with unprecedented rapidity. Excite-ment on the board was intense and brokers bid ½ of 1 per cent. above previous sales in order to get stock ahead of their competi-tors.

order to get stock aneady tors.

The principal gain was made in Reading, which at one time showed an advance over Friday's close of 5 % per cent, and Manhattan recorded a gain of 5 %. Toward the end of business the excitement subsided and the impression began to grow that the benefit to accrue from the contract was overestimated.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—The news of the settle-

LONDON, Sept. 3.—The news of the settle-ment in the case of the Baltimore and Ohio ment in the case of the Baltimore and Ohio Railway has created a most favorable impression on 'change, and there was a buoyant feeling in the American department today. All American stocks advanced ½@1½, and a slighly further improvement was recorded at 1:30 p.m., when it became known that $1,000,000 had been taken for shipment to New York.

Among American bankers here it is the general opinion that the Baltimore and Ohio settlement will have a good effect on the American trunk lines, and especially their workings east and west.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 3.—The Public Ledger of Monday, referring to the Baltimore and Ohio deal will say: "The report that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company is a party to the negotiation is entirely without foundation. The Forum for September shows the usual table of contents—serious, but not too sober; instructive, but not too not too sober; instructive, but not too didactic. Senator Ingalls has an article upon "The Sixteenth Amendment." A Canadian official asks "Is Canada Misgoverned?" Dr. A. Jessopp has the floor this month in the series of chats about the help of books, giving credit, as have his predecessors, to the influence of those great Englishmen, Scott, Tennyson, Carlyle and Browning, but giving the precedence to that fine, strong, but almost neglected book, the "Biglow Papers." This is followed by a thoughtful paper by Mrs. Craik, "Concerning Men," Prof. Cope inquires not too curiously, "What Is the Object of Life?" John Bascom writes of the "Labor Question," followed pertinently by "Profit-Sharing." Prof. Young describes the great telescopes, and Prof. Winchell "Ignatius Donnelly's Comet." Bishop Coxe has a sensible, but scathing article upon the idiccys of "Ames Geographical Names," and Andrew Lang brings up the rear with the vexed subject of "The Manners of Critics."

HOTEL BUILDINGS COSTING $150,000 AT SAN ANTONIO HEIGHTS.

ONTARIO, Sept. 3.—[Correspondence of THE TIMES.] This beautiful spot, the gem of the model colony. is at last to have its much needed hotel accommodation. The Ontario Land and Improvement Company have offered a premium of $300 for the best plans for a main building to cost $75,000, and about $75,000 more will be expended in beau-building to cost $75,000, and about $75,000 more will be expended in beautiful cottages of various styles of architecture in keeping with the surroundings, which will be scattered through this magnificent park of 40 acres, the company having decided to adopt this cottage plan, as they believe that many visitors would greatly prefer the privacy of a home with the comforts of a good hotel convenient thereto.

San Antonio Heights lies just at the entrance to and to the east of San Antonio Cañon, from 2000 to 2500 feet above the sea, has a magnificent view of the Pacific Ocean, Catalina Islands, and the interior valleys and mountain ranges, and, with the charming mountain scenery and climbing, and fine trout streams afforded by San Antonia Cañon, will undoubtedly make one of the most attractive resorts to be found in Southern Calfornia.

The Japanese Prof. Nishigava is at present studying the German art of beer brewing at its source in Manich, where he spent as much as eight days in one brewery. He was sent thither by the Japanese Government, which is desirous of checking the growing consumption of brandy, and contemplates the introduction of German and English beer free of duty, while putting a high tax on stronger alcoholic liquors.

RETURN OF A LONG-LOST SON.

A Young Man Who Went to War Found After Being Mourned as Dead. [Toledo Dispatch in the Chicago Tribune.] Hugh Thompson, of the Fifteenth Ohio, was a resident of Van Wert County, near here, before the war. At the battle of Chickamauga he was struck on the head by a grapeshot and seriously wounded—his comrade thought mortally. They laid him under a tree and a few minutes later were forced to fall back. Thompson fell into the hands of the enemy, and was never heard from until a few weeks ago. During all these years he has been mourned as dead.

He is married, is living in Kansas, and is the father of a number of children. He remembers that he was in the army, but from the battle of Chickamagua until the great fire in Chicago, all is a blank. He does not know where he was nor what he did during all that time. In the excitement of the fire he partially regained his senses, but could not locate his old home. He went to Minnesota and was married there, and went thence to Kansas, where he took up a claim and is farming for a living; and he remembers the death of his mother, which took place when he was 13 years old; that his Captain's name was Updegrove, and that he was in a Rebel prison. The remainder of his early life is a blank. But his comrades, many of whom live in Van Wort, recognize him. The scar made by the grapeshot is on his head. A scar on his right leg, made by a severe cut by an ax when he was a boy, is another strong point in proving his identity. He went away a black haired boy and returns a gray-haired man, but his father, who is tottering under the weight of nearly four-score years, says it is Hugh Thompson, his long-lost son.

Money was raised here and sent to Kansas to bear the expense of Thompson's trip to this place to attend a regimental reunion next week, but before the remittance arrived his Kansas neighbors had donated to the same purpose, and by their generosity he is at his old home, which he left during the war.

MUST BE JOHN ALLMAN.

A Minister's Story About an Oakland Stage Driver. At San Buenaventura, writes Rev. E. A. Laurence, in the New York Independent, which is one of the choicest garden spots of Southern California, I waited from noon till midnight for the stage to Newhall. A big, busy, rush-stage to Newnall. A Dig, Dusy, rushing man, full of affairs and profanity, came among us. Every, sentence was full of oaths. He was greatly excited about something, yet declined the profered brandy of a Michigander. "I half burnt myself out with that years ago." I learned that he was the owner of this and many other stage lines, and a great mail contractor with the Government. Though I shrank from his profanity, I grew interested in the man. His remarkable executive powers showed themselves at every step. He was involved in law suits, and was just on his way to settle one of them. Once a month he passes ouer the whole of his 850 miles of stage lines, inspecting every point.

About sunrise, with a change of horses, there came to me a chance to ride with him in a separate team which he was driving. We talked constantly until noon. His oaths ceased. The rough Californian grew very friendly, then tender. It was not in vain that he had witnessed the death of his Christian wife with heavenly visions and loving entreaties. Unforgotten words and scenes were still powerful within him—this friend of Ingersoll, this daring frontlersman, this dealer with the wildest bravados.

There came a chance for a word about profanity, which was followed by a frank and full acknowledgment. "It's only when I'm excited as I was yesterday that I do it." And then he told me an incident in his life which has appeared in print. But the account was not quite correct, so I will repeat it.

A short time after the close of the Mexican war he was travelling in a stage coach in company with a number of men, among whom was a young Lieut. Grant. There was with them a stage coach in company with a number of men, among whom was a voung Lieut. Grant. There was with them here time the window and told the driver if he didn't stop swearing he would thrash him the next time they stopped to change horses. The lady grew very embarrassed, blushing more and more.

Finally, my friend, whom I will call John A— put hin shead out of the window and told the driver

He certainly was the man.

"Any favor that I can do for you you may depend on receiving," said the President.

Blush Roses. Blush Roses.
In a garden fragrant,
Rioting in bloem,
Where each old-time vagrant
Finds a welcome room.
Where the worn world hushes
With a peaceful sigh,
There a sweet rose blushes
At each passer-by.

In the garden olden Walks a maiden fair, Blue eyes, lashes golder Ripples in her hair.

Ripples in her hair.
Hark! the wicket closes;
Shall she stand or run?
Queen she of the roses,
Blushing but for one!

"Where's the foreman?"
"He's gone to Washington, with an invitation to the President. Won't be back 'fore cold weather. What do you want to paralyze em?"

Cleveland's Measure.
[Hartford Post.]

Harper's Weekly has gauged Mr.
Cleveland's work for reform very accurately. It informs the people that he has "done more than any other man in the country to arouse and interest the public mind in the question." "Of what further use are pins?" inquiredthe teacher of the small boy. "They save millions of lives every year."
"How?" she asked, in astonishment.
"By not swallowing them."

Government bonds were dull but firm. The stock market was extremely strong at the opening, and prices jumped up very sharply, Manhattan rising 5, Reading 44, Jersey Central 3, and others in proportion. The reaction was equally sudden, but the greater part of the advance was retained, and before 130 the market had settled down to comparative steadiness, sithough it remained rather reverish throughout. -: TO OUR OLD SUBSCRIBERS :-

It is customary with newspapers to give premiums to new subscribers only; but the publishers of the Mirror mean to reverse this old rule; they intend to do as well, at least, by their old subscribers—those who have stood by the paper in years past, and paid their money for it "right straight along." We propose to show our appreciation of these friends in a substantial manner; and as the premium to be offered is expensive, and as our express object in offering it is to increase our list of subscribers, we will require every old subscriber who may renew his subscription, in order to receive the valuable premium, to bring in AT LEAST ONE NEW SUBSCRIBER, to whom the premium will be given, as well as to the old subscriber.

An Address to the Fublic.

Capt. Barrett offered the following, which was adopted:

This plain statement to the business men of Los Angeles and those interested in the success of the city and county by the committee making the exhibit at St. Louis this month, is considered advisable. It is imperatively necessary that a fund of at least 20,000 be furnished for the proper display of products of our county and city. A few generous citizens have given up to the present time (through the sale of donated lots) a net fund of $500.

Resolved, That an urgent appeal be made to the real estate dealers, merchants and bankers in the city and county to promptly and generously supply the Finance Committee, through A. H. Denker, Esq., chairman, with funds for the purpose when called upon. or in case of not being visited that they call upon him at his offlice, No. 17 Requena street, for the purpose.

Donating their time and paying their own expenses, the several members of the committeet guarantee to the public that every dollar shall be used in the interest of our city and county.

A communication was read from Prescott, Ariz., stating that the members of the G. A.R. at that place had a very fine mineral exhibit, as elaborate as the famous exhibit at the World's fair at New Orleans, and desiring space in the cars to send the collection to St. Louis. The application was allowed. The meeting then adjourned until 11 o'clock Monday morning.

The South May Revive War Preju dices at Will, But the Loyal Sol-dier of the Nation "Talks Politics" When He Recalls the War.

[Special to Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.]

COLUMBUS (O.), Aug. 26.—Some of the gentlemen who have been engaged for months in piling epithets upon the heads of old soldiers, calling them "paupers," etc., took exception to an article in the Commercial Gazette a few days ago resenting the insult, and say that I am "waving the-bloody shirt." That is exactly the size of the men who are so contemptible in the eyes of men. They have no argument to offer. They have no defense to make. A parrot could utter the same words.

But let us look at this matter a little. For months the "pauper" cry has been hurled at us—not by Southern soldiers, but by the whelps of old Northern Copperheads. These whelps are as venomous as their predecessors. No honorable or fair-minded Southern soldier ever uttered such an expression. A few fellows, who were engaged on staff omous as their predecessors. No honorable or fair-minded Southern soldier ever uttered such an expression. A few fellows, who were engaged on staff duty, or in the Commissary Department of the Confederate army, may have been capable of such conduct, but it remains for the descendants of the Copperheads of the North to take the lead in the matter.

And how inconsistent. When President Cleveland was inaugurated a gentleman rode down the avenue at the head of the procession, dressed in the gray of the late Confederacy. That was not waving the bloody shirt. President Cleveland placed in his Cabinet a man who had been in the Rebel army, to have charge of the department from which Union soldiers' pension-claims must be passed upon and issued, if granted. That was not waving the bloody shirt. Oh, no!

When Gen. R. E. Lee's old saddle ran for Governor of Virginia, and the gentleman in it was followed by his old soldiers, that was not waving the bloody shirt. These persons had all been engaged a few years before in an effort to destroy the Government, but their endeavor to revive the old war feeling was not calculated to wave the bloody shirt. Oh, no!

Not a Democratic paper north of feeling was not calculated to wave the bloody shirt. Oh, no!

Not a Democratic paper north of Mason and Dixon's line has ever condemned putting the inaugural procession in charge of an ex-Confederate officer. Very few Democratic papers in the United States have condemned the placing of an ex-Confederate at the head of the Pension Department; no Democratic paper has ever spoken a word of condemnation of Fitzhugh Lee for resurrecting his uncle's war-saddle and riding into the gubernatorial chair of Virginia with it.

The soldiers up here stood these things with comparative complacency.

The soldiers up here stood these things with comparative complacency. But when Grover Cleveland issued the order to return the rebel flags to those from whom they were captured, the "old boys" just kicked over the traces, and such a storm of objections went up as has not been heard in this land since the firing on Ft. Sumter.

Democratic papers have pretty generally sustained the President in this attempted illegal and unpatriotic act, but not so with Democrats in private life, and particularly old soldiers who have been acting with the Democratic party.

This one act of President Cleveland was a revelation to them. They saw that the heading of the inaugural procession southward meant something. They saw that the placing of an exconfederate over the department of the Government in which they are most directly interested meant something; they saw the bringing out of old saddles and the parades in Virginia meant something. They observed a studied interest in all that had been done, but the cap-sheaf was put on when the flags were ordered to be returned. They saw the Democratic press trailing arms and following the President in all these matters right over into the late rebel camp. They read the brutal message of the President vetoing private pension claims; they stood up under the veto of the dependent bill like men, but when it came to surrendering the flags they captured, they shouted no as with the voice of thunder.

The Democratic papers with one accord depondent big as waying the party.
This one act of President Cleveland

they captured, they shouted no as with the voice of thunder.

The Democratic papers with one accord denounced this as waving the "bloody shirt." When the boys meet at their annual reunions and talk over these matters it is called discussing political questions, and the boys are given to understand that they must stop it. Who says so? Democratic papers, edited by striplings who were not in existence when the great Civil War was upon us, and who have not the least idea of the emotions which fill a soldier's breast. These fellows tell us what we may discuss at soldiers' reunions. The presumption, the gall of such pretension!

When the Democratic press stigmatize old soldiers as being "paupers" and they resent it, that is designated as waving the "bloody shirt." The last ferm is as obnoxious as the first is indecent, and no man with a particle of feeling, with one manly instinct, would indulge in it.

But no matter—soldiers will discuss these questions just the same, and they will not consult Democratic papers as to the language they may use. They did not consult Democratic papers during the war, and the indications are that the advice given would be of a very poor quality.

what to know is, who strack the first blow?" said an Austin justice to Jim Webster, who was the principal witness in an assault and battery case. "Uncle Ike, dah, he hit de fust lick," replied Jim. "Are you positive that Uncle Ike under an incessant fire; forget the war while under an incessant fire; forget the war at reunions; forget old comrades who went down in battle; forget those who lingered and died in the hospital; forget those who were starved to death in prison pens; forget the days of toil and nights of watching! How can such things be forgotten? Soldiers may forgive, but to forget is out of the question.

"What I want to know is, who strack the first blow?" said an Austin justice to Jim Webster, who was the principal witness in an assault and battery case. "Uncle Ike, dah, he hit de fust lick," replied Jim. "Are you positive that Uncle Ike struck the first blow?" "Ob course I is. That old Know Nothing party had very poor quality. Democratic par tion.

According to Democratic authority, it is all right to call a soldier a "pauper," but if he resents it, he talks politics. According to Democratic precedents and authority, it is all right to charge soldiers with waving what they (Democratic papers) are pleased to mildly designate the "bloody shirt," but if the soldier takes exception to this sort of abuse he becomes a partisan. According to Democratic doctrine it is all return flags captured in the conflict to preserve the Union, but if a soldier speaks of it at a gathering of veterans or anywhere else he is guilty of treason almost. Democratic interpretation of anything is always inconsistent, illogical and stupid anything is always inconsistent, illogical and stupid.

But the soldiers are not going to quit talking about that which concerns themselves; they are not going to stop objecting to being called paupers, and they are not going to cease denouncing the a'ttempts to surrender the rebel flags. And Democratic papers may kick and squirm and twist and swear to their heart's content about it.

The laundry had given up Loo Fun as lost for several days. Wong Fat looked anxiously at his unshaved and wild-eyed assistant.

Warm Speech-Making at the Wheeling Soldiers' Reunion-Gov. Fora-ker's Patriotic Defense of the Na-

WHEELING (W. Va.), Aug. 27 .- The reports sent out from here last night about the "joint debate" between Gov. Foraker and Gov. Wilson-do not give any correct idea of the occasion. It was unfortunate that there were no shorthand reporters present to make full reports of all that was said. The incidentiwas_entirely unexpected and unforeseen.

While Gov. Foraker was speaking at the reunion in the afternoon the audience called upon him to tell them about the rebel flags, and, in response to their calls, he did so, but without the use of any language that anybody could take exception to, unless it was the word "rebel."

word "rebel."

It was not known that any one excepted to the use by him of this word, and it is not yet known that even Gov. Wilson did_except, only some of the newspaper reports say so, and that he made the speech in the evening that led to the debate on that account. He did not say anything, however, at any time that indicated that he was offended because of anything Gov. Foraker had cause of anything Gov. Foraker had said.

All the other speakers spoke in the same general strain that Mr. Foraker did, and no one said anything that should offend anybody.

In the evening Gov. Beaver and Gov. Wilson and Gov. Foraker were together at the McClure House, where the Union Veteran League of Pennsylvania ame to serenade them.

Gov. Beaver responded first; then Foraker was called for and spoke for a few minutes. He did not say a word about rebels, or use any expression that could offend anybody, and no one will so claim.

could offend anybody, and no one will so claim.

He merely thanked the serenaders and spoke a few words of compliment for Pennsylvania and her soldiers, and then expressed gratification that while they hailed from Pennsylvania and he from Ohio and they were met in West Virginia, yet they were all alike at home because under the same flag and in the Union they had saved.

When he gave way Gov. Wilson was introduced. Instead of making such speeches as Gov. Beaver and Gov. Foraker had made, he proceeded to discuss the relative merits of the blue and the gray. He claimed that the gray we brave and heroic, and that they fought for what they honestly believed to be right, and then said that so far as he was concerned and those for whom he spoke, the men who wore the gray were entitled to as much honor as the men who wore the jue.

There was loud applause of this by a large crowd of citizens whe had gathered, and to this applause the old soldiers naturally expressed dissent.

One of them called out to know if the men who wore the gray were not traitors.

To this Gov. Wilson answered at con-

He then went on to say that we

He then went on to say that we should strive for peace between the sections and good will, and that to this end we must turn our backs upon the war and quit exciting sectional bitterness by saying the South was wrong, and rebels, etc. He did not allude to Gov. Foraker or anything he had said.

The effect of such a speech on an audience of old soldiers can be better imagined than described. They began audience of old soldiers can be better imagined than described. to call for other speakers. Gen. Gibson responded first, and made, as he always does, an eloquent talk of a few minutes, in which he declared that one side was right and the other wrong, and the soldiers could not therefore be remembered alike.

Still others responded, but they kept calling for Foraker until he mally went out and talked to them a second time. In doing so, he simply elaborated what Gen. Gibson had said, and claimed that we were as anxious to have fraternal feeling now as we were then to save the Union, but that it must be based on a recognition of the results of the war; that while we were as ready as Gen. Wilson to ascribe bravery and honest convictions to the men who wore the gray, yet he did not propose to forget that they were in rebellion against the Government, seeking its overthrow, and trying to establish another government and flag, planted on the institution of human slavery. That in his opinion the war was wicked and unjustifiable, and that it would be unjust to the cause of the Union and the brave men who had died for it to say that the men who wore the gray were entitled to be held in equal esteem with the men who had won the blue. This was the substance of his remarks, and his language was as respectful as an earnest expression would admit of.

As soon as he closed, Gen. Wilson again came to the front, and shocked his own party friends, as well as everybody else, by commencing to talk about Republicans and Democrate, and charged, among other things, that one object of the old soldiers was to dragoon Democratic soldiers of West Virginia into voting the Republican ficket. He then went on, at great length, with apparent bad temper, to charge the Republican party with being a sectional party, always waving the bloody shirt and stirring up strife. He said Republicans were always ringing the changes on the war, and saying the South was wrong, and demanding that they get down on their knees and beg forgiveness. He then entered upon a eulogy of himself, saying that he was a Union man—just mania for railroad information and statistics, informed me that the number of drunken men in suburban trains on summer nights is almost double what it is in winter. One case may be that in summer the craving for amusement increases. In cold weather man has a tendency to hibernate; but in the spring and summer, when nature awakes and rejoices, a listless desire for pleasure and liberty comes over the human mind; and with some men the pleasure of getting drunk and the liberty of intoxication are of grant and summer, one case may be that in summer the craving for amusement increases. In cold weather man has a tendency to hibernate; but in the spring and summer, when nature awakes and rejoices, a listless desire for pleasure of getting drunk and the liberty of intoxication are probably more easily got at than any others.

Washington.]

The erstwhile somnolent village of Marion, down on Buzzard's Bay, is fairly beside itself, says the Boston Record, at the advent of the mistress of the White House. Everybody you meet takes a brace and looks important in the consciousness that he is a Marionette, favored of all the earth. The Hotel Sippican is a quaint institution, only possible in an out-of-the-way resort like Marion. The "office" is about eight by ten feet, and absolutely devoid of furnishings, save a big wooden spittoon into which various rubbish is put for safe keeping. The desk is a wide pine board, with a little glass case of villainous cigars at one end. By leaning over it you can touch the wall across-the intervening space occupied by the clerk. The bed-rooms in this curious hostelry have a modest section of carpet, a veritable antique in wool, the bed is of the slat variety, and a tuneful band of mosquitoes hover around it always, so as to be entirely ready when the victim arrives.

There is one grizzled and wind-beaten veteran down there familiarly called "Cap'n Dan," in whom the visit of Mrs. Cleveland has aroused a vast ambition. He owns a catboat, which rejoices in the name of Polly Ann, and it is the one desire of his heart to take Gen. Greely's guest out sailing in her. Just how to manage the affair according to etiquette the old fellow does not know, but he is bound to arrange it somehow. "Why, if that han'some creetur'd only step into my boat and take a sail down the bay." he murmured to his sympathetic hearers, "by thunder. I'd paint out Polly Ann an' put on Frances Cleveland to the craft as sure's I'm alive."

Another village character intends to turn this opportune visit to some substantial account. He is Bill Gifford, who is always on hand at the trains to carry the stray passenger down to the hotel, and carry him right back if he is alarmed at the appearance of things. Bill's florid face fairly glowed as he planned his scheme. "I'm going to run the carriage," he said, "that I took Mrs. Cleveland down in to every train, and Many are the odd characters who come here from the surrounding country places, hoping to see Mrs. Cleveland. They are mostly quiet and inoffensive, and seldom give the object of their admiration any reasonable cause for complaint. A large proportion of them are farmers with their families, who drive intertown from all directions. who drive into town from all directions, who drive into town from all directions, and the interest they take in the President's wife is almost pathetic rather than droll, for to many of them the little journey and the fleeting glimpses they may chance to get of her are the events of a lifetime.

they may chance to get of her are the events of a lifetime.

One of the strangest and at the same time most touching incidents of this nature occurred yesterday morning. Two deaf and dumb people, an old gentleman and his wife, came in on the early train, and, by writing on a pad of paper, contrived to let it be known that they wanted to be shown Mrs. Cleveland's house. The World correspondent offered his services as "guide, philosopher and friend" for this occasion only. The three stepped into a waiting carriage and drove away, the correspondent holding a written conversation and showing the places all at once. Their strange, mysterious silence was eloquent of delight and pleasure as their guide pointed out Captain Hadley's house, showed them the tiny beach where Mrs. Cleveland bathes, Mr. Gilder's house, the town below, the church where she attended service, and other places of interest. other places of interest.

we met Mrs. Cleveland and her friends walking down to the landing. We were driving rapidly, and did not notice her until she had bowed, with a pleasant good morning. He had had no time to prepare the minds of his charges, and passed her without their knowing it.

He explained the matter to them at once, and they were full of excitement. So we turned, drove back, and turned again, in order that they might see her. Some carriages came along just then, so that we were compelled to drive slowly, and so close to her that the guide felt an apology was necessary, guide felt an apology was necessary, and so said:

Flats in Boston.

[Popular Science News.]

In Boston as well as other large cities the Pueblo-like apartment-house is rapidly supplanting the old system of separate dwellings. On all the desirable building sites these great eight or ten story buildings rise into the air; and the demand for their contracted and uncomfortable "flats" at exorbitant rents is far beyond the supply. A large and crowded city is a very undesirable place of residence, both on account of sanitary and social conditions, and we are glad to note the increasing number of suburban homes within a convenient railroad distance of the city. Still, we suppose a large proportion of the population will continue to live within metropolitan limits; and the residence of the future inhabitant of Boston or New York bids fair to revert to the type adopted so many years ago by the prehistoric natives of New Mexico and in her sweetest and most gracious man-ner, saying:
"I am sure I am very glad to see them." The gentleman removed his hat and bowed in a very courtly fashion, and his wife's face beamed so hat and bowed in a very courtly fashion, and his wife's face beamed so much plasure as she returned Mrs. Cleveland's bow that she must have been happy to confer so much joy in so simple a manner. More smiles, more stately bows and we drove on.

The simple, unaffected manners and the deep kindness of heart which Mrs. Cleveland shows in little things to all about her, especially to old people, children, and to those who might be said to be in a lower station of life, endear her to everybody, and demonstrate that the President could not have sent out a better vote-getter than his wife has proved to be. It is this sincere kindliness of disposition which lies at the root of many of the graceful things she does which enables her to meet every one with so much tact, and to say and do always the right thing in the right place.

Drunkenness in Summer and Winter.

[Boston Post.]

I have learned lately to my surprise I have learned lately to my surprise that there is much more drunkenness in summer than in winter, and I should be glad to hear that some social philosopher had undertaken to tell us why. Is it because hot weather produces a lassitude that tempts people to resort to stimulants? If this be so, a good many sunstrokes might be accounted for. I observe that in St. Louis, where the heat has been almost intolerable this summer, people have found out that much beer drinking in hot weather is dangerous, and that, in consequence, the venders of soda water have enjoyed a "boom" at the expense of the saloon-keepers. A friend of mine, who has a

Out at Sea.

I know that I am dying, mate; so fetch the Bible here, What's laid unopened in the chest for five and-twenty year; And bring a light along of you, and read a bit to me.

Who haven't heard a word of it since first I came to sea.

It's five-and-twenty year, lad, since she went to her rest
Who put that there old Bible at the bottom of my chest;
And I can well remember the words she says to me:

"Now, don't forget to read it, Tom, when you get out to sea."

And I never thought about it, mate, for it clean silpped from my head; But when I came from that first voyage the dear old girl was dead.

And the neighbors told me, while I stood as still as still can be, That she prayed for me and blessed me as was just gone out to sea.

And then I shipped again, mate, and forgot the Bible there, for I never gave a thought to it a-sailing everywhere;
But now that I am dying, you can read a bit to me, and for so the Bible there, and find a little prayer, lad, and say it uright loud, and have the lord'll hear above it all, for he's been out at sea.

As I seem to think about it, now I'm ill and down at sea.

And find a little prayer, lad, and say it uright loud, to the world of the lits of the world of the lits of the lord'll hear above it all, for he's been out at sea.

In Yolo County and in forty other counties are lands for which a young man can better afford to pay $100 per acre than he can afford to pay $20 in the prairie States, for within ten years they will yield him a fortune every year, but these are not the lands to which the first attention of settlers should be drawn. We want population, and it must be attracted by proving the great contrast between the first price of our cheap lands and the value of their products.

A Giancey Monument.

[Oakland Enquirer.]

A modest monument has just been erected in the St. Helena Cemetery over the grave of Theodore Glancey, the editor who was shot in Santa Barbara in 1880. For an inscription it bears these words, being almost the last which Glancey uttered: "I die for a principle, and would not go back on it now if I could." It is a fact that Glancey died for a principle, and a principle which is among the vital ones of this day. He was editing the Santa Barbara Press, and his party nominated a candidate for district attorney of the county who was one of the representatives of the worst class of the "bhoy" element. He was not a fit man to guard the peace and order of the community because there was no one who engaged more frequently in disturbing them than he did. Glancey promptly denounced the nomination in the Press, and refused to support it. Gray, the candidate in question, met the editor and shot him, inflicting a mortal wound. Before dying Glancey mortal wound. Before dying Glancey quoted. He was a martyr, and his murder represented an evil principle which is lodged in the political practices of the country, and which exerts a powerful influence on the side of bad government. Gray represented the idea that even a bad man must receive the support of his party and its newspapers, when he has managed, by no matter what means, to obtain a nomination, and Glancey represented the idea that it is the right and duty of every citizen, but especially of every newspaper, to reject corrupt and disreputable candidates, by whateven freedom and slavery. The cause for which this editor died was no old, outworn one, but a cause which is fresh and living—the irrepressible conflict between good government and bad, as it is being waged in our own times. Such an event as the death of Glancey ought to be commemorated in a more public manner than by a simple tombstone, erected seven years after he died. There ought to be a public monument te proving the great contrast between the first price of our cheap lands and the value of their products.

The most extravagant boom price of city property will seem to have been reasonable when we have an increase of a million in our rural population.

We are trying to induce that increase, and the rise in realty around cities is solely in anticipation of its coming. The man who is doing the most for California just now is the one who is holding down the price of farm property, or is inducing large holders to subdiyide into small tracts and sell alternate holdings at a reasonable figure. This was the policy of the owners of the colony tracts whose settlement has brought wonderful prosperity to Fresno without any boom. It will do the same for Kern, Merced and Stanislaus, and will make principalities out of Colusa and the counties of the Sacramento Valley. Sutter county is an example of the effect of such a settlement as California needs. The man who visits Sutter is delighted while there and loth to I leave it, because the thrift of the Middle States farmer seems there to have been applied to land which Nature prepared for a garden. A glance at the statistics of Sutter county may show what we mean by contrasting the price of such lands with the values they have produced. The county has 391,000 acres of land, a population of $4,120,451. The valuation is $824 per capita, of men, women and children, and it is only a little more than $10 per acre for the land!

Nothing can exhibit a more comfortable condition for a farming com-acre for the land!

Nothing can exhibit a more comfortable condition for a farming community, and yet it is typical of what many other counties are, or may easily become. In such a community doubling the population means doubling the production and the wealth; and this seems to be ill understood by thousands of our people who have grown into the sunshiny conditions of existence here, and who are falsely impressed that doubling our population means dividing our wealth and the resources for its creation. Both double with the population. If a man's property is worth $100,000 in a population of one million, it will be worth $200,000 in a population. it will be worth $200,000 in a population of two millions. Such increase is not a boom. It is as natural as the increase in the height and weight of a man at 20 years of age over what they were when he was only 10.

were when he was only 10.

What we stand for it the condition of this normal increase of property values which population, and only population, can effect, and therefore we blazon our banner with invitations to the permanent settler, and we don't want his enthusiasm curdled by fancy-striped prices for rural property. A gain of 100 per cent. in city property ought to satisfy a man even with the appetite of a hog, and that gain comes as naturally as morning comes after the night is spent, with a gain of 100 per cent. in population.

POSTOFFICE ADDRESS,

Through the Neglected Garden—What the Buswhackers Said—The Waiting Horses-The Flight of Lilian and the Colonel—The Search Through the House.

It was still raining and the wind noaned through the gloom and darkness, which was so intense they could As they were cautiously making their way to the spot where their horses stood securely fastened, sheltered from the storm by the overhanging boughs, the sound of voices attracted their at-Listening they discovered tention. Listening they discovered that there were sentinels posted in the opposite garden, not far from the high wall which separated it from the enclosure where they stood. The conversation was carried on in low tones, yet almost every word reached the ears so intensely strained to catch the slightest sound or movement. "Blast that confounded Yankee colonel, if we don't catch him tonight 'twill be because the devil don't help us. I'll wager a box of the best Havanns that he swings before morning." "Your hand on that comrade. I don't see how the feller's to escape unless "Your hand on that comrade. I don't see how the feller's to escape unless that white-livered [gal of our Cap'ns plays the traitor, and sets her purty woman's wits to work and outgenerals us all. The chap must be in the house, sure, and as he aint moonshine or spirit he can't creep out through a crack and make his escape. Ah, but he's given us a hot chase, though. But we'll be even with him yet, and send dryer than it is out here in this horrible night."

Lilian shuddered, and her hand met the strong, steady clasp of her companion's with a trembling grasp, but not a whisper did she utter, and they went on with not a sound to betray their cautious movements.

The horses unfastened, Lilian led the way to a small door in the high wall, just wide enough to allow them to pass, and which was hidden from the observation of the passerby on the opass, and which was hidden from the observation of the passerby on the pass, and which was hidden from the observation of the passerby on the order of the whisper did she utter, and they went on with not a sound to betray their cautious movements.

The horses unfastened, Lilian led the way to a small door in the high wall, just wide enough to allow them to pass, and which was hidden from the observation of the passerby on the highway, by the growth of slender bushes and weeds which they easily pushed aside as they made their egress.

Now they were in the broad, smooth highway, an eighth of a mile, at least from the house, covered by the darkness, and the sound of their horses' feet drowned by the bellowing tempest. Lilian sprang lightly to her saddle, and as quickly her companion was mounted, and away they dashed into the distance and darkness. The brave girl knew every foot of the road they were to traverse, and through the inky gloom she led the way with fearless courage, and with no thought of any danger but that from which they fied. Meanwhile all was confusion at the old stone house. The trembling Chloe at last succeeded in unbarring the door to her impatient master, and he strode in followed by his villainous-looking band of murderous bushwhackers.

"Search the house, boys, every nook and corner of it, till you find that infernal blue-coated Yankee, and we'll string him right up in this very com, where the blatant fool has dared to steal in like a sneaking coward with his cursed loyalty. He shall hang higher than Haman, if it costs me my soul, and I'll see his filthy carcass rot in the sun before one inch of these green sods shall cover him."

They dispersed through the house, and soon lights were twinkling in every room of the great, gloomy old mansion, the Captain himself repairing at once to his daughter's chamber. He knocked loudly and after a few moments' delay, hastily pushed open the door of her room. The old negress had followed him, dreading the moment when Lilian's absence should be discovered, but the while concealing her terror with a well assumed air of indifference and simplicity that tended to at once disarm all suspicions of her knowledge of

"You tell the truth, now, or I'll take it out of your old black hide—where's that renegade Yankee colonel—where's he hidden?"

Chloe looked into the threatening face, dark with its heavy frown, and met the angry fire of her master's eyes with a steady, unmoved gaze, as she replied: "De young Cunnel, why, bress yer, massa, old Chloe dunno nothin' bout him—only he was yer a little while dis mornin' after Mistis Lilian had dun gone away: specis like he's in mebbe it was de Yankees."

Aunt Chloe's seeming tauthfulness and simplicity disarmed somewhat the suspicions of her master, though it did not entirely dispel them. The old negress had alway been a trusty and favorite servañt, and he could hardly believe that so much cunning and duplicity were hidden under that calm and simple exterior. He little dreamed of the earnest outgoings of that untutored heart after freedom, or of the devotion of that simple soul to the starry banner which was to her a sure ensign of hope and deliverance. Lilian's unswerving loyalty had found a strong echo in the bosom of her old gurse, and had bound the faithful creature more firmly than ever to her young inistress, and now she would dare anything for her safety, and that of "de young massa," who was fighting to bring "de year ob jubilee."

The bushwhacker laid his hand again roughly upon her shorlder—"Mind, you, Chloe," he said, "if I find you've been lying to me to saye the neck of that damned Yankee, I'll tan you till every inch of your black hide drops off from your old bones," and with a fierce scowl and muttered curse he turned from her and descended again to the parlor.

A tall, dark, evil-looking man was there before him, pacing the room with rapid strides, his large, brilliant, black eyes dashing with malignant hate and south the parlor.

"This tells the story," he said, as he thrust a note into his leader's hand, which he seized with excited haste, and read:

Is it asked how may we please God? By serving him. Do your duty, and you infallibly win the Divine approval. Go straight forward in the path of righteousness, and you are certain to have his smile.

A man who thinks to sustain a Christian character without seeking experimental godliness, has been compared to the Spartan who, after vainly trying to make a dead body stand upon its feet, exclaimed, "It wants something within." OBSERVATIONS ON THE IDEAS

Doctrine of Orthodox Christianity
-Views of a Free-Thinker-A Chip

LOL ANGELES, Aug. 31 .- [To the Editor of THE TIMES.]—The article by Wong Chin Foo, in the August number of the North American Review, in which not only the doctrines, but also the character, the morals, the business habits, the domestic life, the all round sense of right and wrong characteristic of the American Christian and the heathen Chinaman are sharply contrasted, deserves more than a passing notice. When we consider that for many years we have been sending to China missionaries to convert the "heathen in his blindness" to our God, our religion, our church, on the assumption that we were the favorites of heaven, the redeemed of the Most High, saved by the blood of Christ, and that all beyond the pale of Christendom were the children of perdition, "without God and without hope in the world," exposed to "everlasting damnation," is it not turning the tables on us most effectually when one who knows whereof he speaks, and whom we have deeply commiserated (theologically), challenges a comparison of the life, the character, the religion, the God, the heaven, of the Christian with those of the "benighted" whose souls we are trying to save, while we deliberately and persistently hold them at every possible disadvantage?

The great enemy of Christianity today is not scientific agnosticism, Ingersollism or open-mouthed infidelity, it is Christianity itself, as it is popularly defined and practically illustrated. Say that from all eternity, and wholly irrespective of merit or personal worth, God elected a certain number to everlasting salvation and another certain number to everlasting salvation and another certain number to everlasting salvation and another certain number to everlasting torment, that Christianity is a divine after-thought, an "Act to amend an act"; that in Eden the original plan of God was so completely thwarted that He has not yet recovered from the appalling disaster; that in the management of his many years we have been sending to China missionaries to convert the Eden the original plan of God was so completely thwarted that He has not yet recovered from the appalling disaster; that in the management of his own affairs he became so involved that the only way of extricating himself from His terrible dilemma was to die on the cross, and yet that by thousands of millions He is continuing the creation of human beings, though according to current definitions of the conditions of salvation only a very small proportion of the human family have at this moment the slightest hope of ever entering heaven—teach these as the cardinal doctrines of Christianity, and is it wonderful that in loyalty to his national nature, his chief dependence in the investigation of every other subject, Wong Chin Foo, a man of keen analytical powers and a high moral sense, is obliged to reject the whole scheme? Is it not intrinsically improbable? Is not this entire religious system derogatory to the character of God?

But take another view of Wong Chin Fools presentations of the street was the cardinal follows.

But take another view of Wong Chin But take another view of Wong Chin Foo's presentation of the case, and a view made conspicuous by the extract from his article in yesterday's TIMES. He declares that the average, the representative, Christian is not so good a man, not so truthful, so honest, so faithful, so sincere, so parental, so fallial, so trustworthy in any of the relations of life as the average, the representative Chinaman; and who will reply to his tabulated facts? Here is a very intelligent man, who gives his very intelligent man, who gives his reasons for preferring to remain a heathen instead of becoming a heathen instead of becoming a Christian, and summarily, they are, first, that without silencing his reason, which Confucianism bids him foster and follow, he could not accept Christian doctrines as they are popularly defined; and, secondly, without "stepping down." without vastly lowering his standard of character and sacrificing his self-respect, he could not accept Christianity as it is exemplified by its professed disciples. This is a tremendous arraignment of the religion that is inviting the world to its altars. tremendous arraignment of the religion that is inviting the world to its altars. Who would dare say it is unjust? Is it not food for reflection that a very intelligent Chinaman comes to this country, and, after studying long and carefully the type of our civilization and the character and spirit of our religion, instead of heeding the popular cry, "Come to Jesus," enthusiastically and unqualifiedly invites Christians to "Come to Confucius," assuring them

Do we not know that outside the church there is springing up a very large and very intelligent and influential class who actually doubt the sincerity, the honesty of many religious certy, the homesty of many religious teachers—a class whose standard of morality is higher than that of the church. Huxley has distinctly intimated that a scientist would not dare ignore reason, suppress his convictions or manufacture opinions as many a clergyman does. For example, how can a man be an evolutionist, as each of the leading scientists of the world. can a man be an evolutionist, as each of the leading scientists of the world is, and at the same time a believer in the fundamental doctrines of Christianity as above stated. And yet thousands of our religious teachers are trying to ride these two horses which face in diametrically opposite directions. face in diametrically opposite directhere is a deep and wide-spread conviction that the popular church and religion of the day are not supported and administered in honesty and conscientiousness.

Mr. Editor, are you aware that a few years since the Japanese government sent to England a commission whose duty it was to study the spirit and workings of Christianity amidst institutions and agencies of its own creation, and that after a year spent in, a carreful examination of the subject as conscientiousness. reation, and that after a year spent in, a careful examination of the subject as it presented itself to them, they returned home and reported against the acceptance of orthodox Christianity by the brightest and most promising of all the oriental nations? And recently the Unitarians of America have been asked to send to that country a missionary competent to set forth the doctrines, principles, and aims of liberal Christianity; as there and here, and everywhere the demand of the hour is for a religion that is in harmony with reason, with our highest moral intuitions, with the great facts of experience, the laws of mind, the marvelous disclosures of science and the general trend and sweep of things. MAN OF ENGLAND. Due to Her-Mrs. Gladstone's Po-

(London Letter in New York Sun.)

While the effect of the Northwich election upon the future of parties and statesmen absorbs the attention of politicians, the victory of the Home Rule candidate is admitted to be a personal one for the Gladstone family, and, in a special sense, for Mrs. Gladstone. Her political power is essentially unlike that of Lady Holland, or Lady Palmerston, or Lady Beaconsfield. She has neither personal beauty nor vast wealth, nor blue-blood lineage, nor a London drawing-room. But within ten years she has become an acknowledged power in shaping the course of political events, and this power has its source in her intellectual character and her high womanly integrity.

high womanly integrity.
The Northwich contest had in it something actually personal between the families of Gladstone and the root something actually personal between the families of Gladstone and the root and branches of the Grosvenor stock.

When, all but fifty years ago, Gladstone married Catherine Glynne, of Hawarden Castle, Flintshire, the bride was a tall, long featured, amiable, but sedate Englishwoman, whose manners as described by an old friend of her father, were shy to awkwarkness. She was well educated and by nature, as well as by attainments, well suited for the companion and closest friend of the man who has been the greatest of England's statesmen. Family cares, which in time included eight children, evenly divided as to sex, absorbed her early prime; and a more lovable or loving household does not exist in the country. Most of them are either attached to the paternal home or near enough to be called to its hearth. None of them are brilliant in the shadow of their father's greatness. But all are accomplished, dutiful, and exemplary.

The home is Mrs. Gladstone's. The exemplary.

The home is Mrs. Gladstone's. The inheritance of Sir John Gladstone's son was chiefly commercial and personal; and great a financier as the grand old man is for the Empire, he was not particularly thrifty in keeping his own affairs in good shape. He spent money lavishly in travel and in the acquisition of the resources of mental pleasure lavishly in travel and in the acquisition of the resources of mental pleasure with which Hawarden abounds. Their children were taught everything which money could procure. During all the intervening years between marriage and the maturity of the youngest it was impossible for the family income to be increased, except by the emoluments of office at intervals; and it is doubtful whether Mr. Gladstone is a pound better off for the princely salary he has had in cabinets. None of the Gladstone sons added anything by marriage or otherwise to the family income; and the daughters married wisely, two of them, but not well in the worldly sense. In their enlightened and tender devotion to their family, the Gladstones have shown that perfect probity and healthful sweet nature which are characteristic of them in all their social relations.

which are characteristic of them in all their social relations.

Whenever the young members of the Gladstone family went abroad in the vicinage of Hawarden, they were very likely to meet the young members of the Grosvenor family, for you must pass Eaton Hall. the ancient seat of the Earls, to reach Hawarden. The River Dee, while it divides Flintshire from Cheshire, cannot keep them apart around the curve where it deposited the Romans and pointed out to them a formidable site for walls and fortifications. Chester is the Latin castrum; and the ruins, all but invisible, mouldy and hoary, still bear witness to the strength and thoroughness of Roman handlwork. The families became political allies and domestic associates. Gladstone, a man of ideas, was quite content to permit Earl Grosvenor, a man of wealth, to be the political magnate of the domain. For twenty-two years the Earl sat for Chester. His first wife, a daughter of the Duke of Sutherland, died, leaving him seven children, of whom the late candidate, Lord Henry Grosvenor, is the second. He is 26 years of age, and a hopeless nonentity. The second wife of the Duke of Westminster is a daughter of Baron Chesham.

The wealth of the house is enormous. The Earl inherited cash from his father amounting to $2,000,000, and estates, urban and rural, whose total value it is hazardous to guess at. He has 20,000 acres in Cheshire, 70,000 acres of deer forest by lease in Sutherlandshire, receives $100,000 a year rent for the houses occupied by the Duke of acres of deer forest by lease in Sutherlandshire, receives $100,000 a year rent for the houses occupied by the Dukes of Grafton, Marlborough and Wellington; owns the Bedford, Norfolk, Portland and Westminster properties in London; receives impropriate tithes; has leaseholds of woods and plantations, and adds to all this the profits of mines of iron, tin, lead and copper. His actual income, for which neither he nor any of his stock ever did an honest day's work. his stock ever did an honest day's work, cannot be less than $13,000,000. His city property, moreover, is practically untaxed, the tenants or the public making all the improvements and he pocketing the increase of the unearned values.

man is tenacious of trust and a sentimental friend to those who are invincibly loyal to him, but he has that noble philosophy of soul which discards enmities and fluds in human rivalry, antagonism, and collision only passing interest. It is this nobleness of nature which enshrines a bust of his arch enemy, Disraeli, over one of his writing tables in the magnificent library at Hawarden. It is this magnanimity which seals his lips toward hectoring old John Bright.

But the motive of the Marquis of Westminster was not so pure. He still yearned for a seat among England's Dukes. He assiduously courted the Gladstone's, and the gossips even hinted at marriages between the young people—an absurd speculation. In 1874 the Marquis became the Duke of Westminster by favor of the great commoner, who had attained by genius the necessary pitch of power which the wealth of the Grosvenors was unable to compass. The Duke's gratitude was boundless. The story of the Millais portrait, painted to be worshipped and then sold with derision and contempt, is too familiar for repetition. The Duke was one of the first to oppose Mr. Gladstone's home-rule conversion. Nor was he timorous or delicate in his de-

Gladstone's home-rule conversion. Nor twas he timorous or delicate in his desertion. He resorted to every device known to crafty politics to steal away seats' in Liberal constituencies. His tenants and servants were ordered within a year to vote on two occasions for Tories, and they tamely did so. The passion of the Duke toward the great commoner gradually exceded all bounds, and throughout Flint and Cheshire the old families became inflamed by the memory of his former treason, his professed repentance, and the fullness of reward with which his return to loyalty had been signalized.

Mrs. Gladstone, meanwhile, had become a woman of affairs. Her tall, firm, unshapely, and uncouth figure is as familiar in London and throughout the country as the Grand Old Man's.
She is never absent from his side. She rode with him through savage London mobs, believing her presence would shield his gray hair. She is accustomed to sit in the House of Commons a many hours as he, unseen except by the fortunate few in the ladies' or the Peeress' gallery, where she usually went, often with the Duchess of Albany, while he was Prime Minister.
She dresses generally in black silk or velvet, without style or adornment.
Her age, a certain graciousness of aspect, her earnestness, her total loss of herself in him, her tact among politicians, her favor with the Queen, and her popularity with the people all combine to make her a political power unique and unprecedented. The sympathy of the electors of Northwich was intense with her, and it was fanned into fervor by astute and well-bred speeches of Herbert Gladstone, who, although not eager nor brilliant, gives promise of a useful public career.

The Primrose League is not popular in Cheshire. The ladies of Eaton Hall despise politics as ungenteel—as something for the shrieking sisters exclusively. The women of the constituency admire and love Mrs. Gladstone to a degree amounting to infatuation.
The domestic influence was altogether with Mr. Brunner. The, visits paid,

The people of Jefferson are not naturally superstitious, but it is safe to predict that they will be in the future. Barrister M. H. Reynolds of that place went to his friend's, Dr. D. B. "Mark, I've got an idea that somebody's about the store; something's wrong with the safe."

"Stuff and nonsense," responded the attorney; "you're crazy."

"No, I'm not. Just put on your hat, Mark, and come along. I'm going to see about this."

The home is but the life of the State in miniature. The true home is governed by just laws; it requires respect for and obedience to them. The lessons of submission founded upon right are learned there. Obedience becomes a habit, and the habit once fixed, there is no tendency toward disobedience. Revolutionary movements that tend toward unsettling governments never have their root in the hearts of those who have been rightly trained during their formative years. Traitors and law-breakers are not the children of those who have "trained up the child in the way he should go."

Just so long as the majority of American homes are happy homes, regulated by affection and controlled by just principles, and the children have wise mothers, who throw about there proper restraints and tender influences, just so long will the liberties of the country be safe and its institutions preserved. It would be impossible to make a tyrant of a man who had a mother like the mother of Abraham Lincoln; to make a surper of one trained as was Washington; to make a political dictator of the son of devoted parents like Gen. and Mrs. Grant; to create an infidel from one raised in the religious atmosphere of a home where was the influence of a McCash or a Hopkins. The happy homes of America are the altars where the fires of her liberties are kindled, and her free institutions are nurtured. So long as they endure will all that makes us great and free continue.

Fried Tomatoes.—Select smooth, hard tomatoes, wash and wipe, but do not pare them, cut in halves and lay the cut side in flour. Let the butter get hot in the pan, then lay in the tomatoes, the floured side down, and watch closely that they do not burn; turn as soon as brown. A sauce is by some considered an addition. olicy Outlined—A Man of Fords—The Utes Not Humorist

The recent ruction on the part of William H. Colorow, Duke of Rawhide Buttes and heir presumptive to the throne of Yellow Jack Park, brings the price of land on the Government frontier.

Signor Colorow is of Indian parentage and his lineage, such as it is, is very strong. His ancestors ran back as far as the earlier dawn of the Christian era. They claimed the land extending in a southerly direction from the North Pole, and seemed to ignore the fact that it had been sold for taxes. The Indian has always been in favor of representation without taxation, and Colorow has believed in a community of grub, allowing the white man to retain a controlling interest in common, wet-browed toil. He has always been willing to divide his bread with the pale-face. He has offered, time and again, to give the white man the bread that was sweatened with honest sweat, while he took his plain. He says that to prefer bread that tastes of prespiration shows a deprayed taste.

to prefer bread that tastes of prespira-tion shows a deprayed taste.

Colorow has for years been a terror to the people of Northwestern Colorado, Eastern Utah and Southern Wyoming. Every spring it used to be his custom to stroll into North Park and prospect for prospectors. Once he came to call on me. He had been there longer than I had, and so, of course, it was nothing more than etiquette that he should call on me.

on me.

He seemed to enjoy his call very much. I could not think of anything to say, though generally I am of a bright and happy disposition. After I had asked him how his mother was, I could not think of anything else to interest him. Finally I thought of Capt. John Smith and how he amused a hostile band by showing them his compass and new suspenders. I had recompass, but I had a new watch which I carried in a buckskin watch-pocket, and I thought I would show him the sweep-second and fly-back and let him see the wheels go round.

second and fly-back and let him see the wheels go round.

When Colorow is captured, if the United States of America has no use for that watch, I would be glad to have it returned to me at No. 32 Park Row, "New York.

Colorow is a man of few words. I will never forget what he said to me when he went away. He held up two fingers and said in a voice that did not seem to waver.

"Mebbe so, two sleeps more, you git out."

"Mebbe so, two sleeps more, you git out."

I sometimes think that when a man says very little we are more apt to take an interest in what he says. It was so in his case. I got to thinking over his remark after he had gone and I decided to accept of his generous offer.

He had 'given me two sleeps; but I do not require much sleep anyway, and when I got to thinking about Colorow and his restless manner while he was my guest I could not sleep so well as I had formerly, and so I have been doing most of my sleeping since that in a more thickly settled country. I remember that I walked feverishly about twenty-five miles, I judge, in a northerly direction.

I left a small but growing mine there at that time in charge of the Utes, and hope they used it judiciously.

The Ute Nation is divided into two sections, viz, the Southern Utes, who have been pretty generally friendly, and the Northern or White River Utes, who break out into fits of emotional insanity whenever their ponies get their bellies full of grass.

My policy—one which, I regret to say, has never been adopted by the Government—is to hire a sufficient number of armed herders to take the entire grand remnant sale of Indian tribes out on the plains and watch them all summer, rounding them up and counting them every morning and evening to see that they are all there. Through the day they might be kept would get plenty of fresh air, and at the same time do good in a modest way. But the scheme for "Utelizing" the Utes is 100 years ahead of the age, and so I do not expect that it will meet with the indorsement of a sluggish way. But the scheme for the state is 100 years ahead of the age, and so I do not expect that it will meet with the indorsement of a sluggish Indian question, viz., a right and a wrong side. That is why the Indian question wears so well.

One of the great wrongs incident to the matter is the great delay in officially reaching the war department in such a way as to attract the eye of the speaker. By the time a courier can get into a telegraph station and wire the Governor of a State, who notifies the Adjutant-General to write a dictated letter with his trenchant type-writer, apprising the commander of the department, who is at Coney Island or Carlsbad, with no typewriter nearer than fifteen miles, who wires the Governor to make active inquiries about the matter, and by the time the governor has sent a committee, who go within fifty miles of the scene of hostillities, and return at the end of six weeks to report that they do not know whether there has been an outbreak or not, and then when a ranchman is really killed and reputable eye-witnesses who were personally acquainted with deceased, and will swear that they have no interest in the result of the outbreak, come in and make a written and grammatical request for troops, and the War Department gets thoroughly rested—the Indians have gone home, washed the gore off their hands and resumed their quiet, humdrum life. Like trying to treat a man in Liverpool for softening of the brain by applying the mind cure per cable from New York, the remedy is too remote from the disease. Indians are quick and impulsive in the matter of homicide. They are slow to grapple with anything of a humorous nature, and all the humorous lecturers who have been on the Ute lecture course have lost money, but in the holocaust line or general arson, torture and massacre business they act with astonishing rapidity. As a race they regard this entire land as their own, just as the mosquitoes claim New Jersey, simply because they were there first.

The Indians see that the property is improving, and so they feel more and more wealthy and arrogant. They claim that they will never give up their rights unless they get hard up, and even th

Colorow claimed that it was incorrect, and the notes were found afterward on the stenographer's body. It is about as ticklish business to report an Indian speech as it is to poultice a boil on the person of the Ameer of Cabul.

In closing Colorow said: "Warriors, our sun is set. We are most of us out on third base, and we have no influence with the umpire.
"Once I could stand on the high ground and one shout would fill the forest with warriors. Now the wailing wind catches up my cry and bears it away like the echo of our former greatness, and I hear a low voice murmur 'Rats.'

ness, and I hear a low voice murmur 'Rats.'
"Whisky and refinement have filled our land with sorrow. The white mancrossed the dark waters in his large cance and filled the forest with churches our land with sorrow. The white mancrossed the dark waters in his large cance and filled the forest with churches and railroad accidents.

"The Indian loves not to make money and own aldermen, for which he has no use. He loves his wives and his children and intrusts them with the responsibility of doing all his work. The white man comes to us with honeyed words and says if we will divide our lands with him he will give us a present, and when we give him a county and a half he gives us a red collar-button and a blue book, in which he has written in his strange and silent language, 'When this you see, remember me.' Our warriors are weak and have the hearts of women. They care not for the warpath or the chase. Most of them want to go on the stage. Once my warriors went with me at a moment's warning to clean out the foe. They slept in the swamps with the rattlesnakes at night and fought like wolves in the daytime. Now my warriors will not go on the warpath without a valise, and some of them want to carry their dinner.

"Some day, like the fall of a mighty oak in the forest, Colorow will fall to the earth and he will rise no more. You will be scattered to the four winds of heaven, and you will go no more to battle. Some of you will starve to death, while others will go to New York and wear a long linen duster, with the price of cut-rate tickets down the back. Some of you will die with snakes in your moccasins, and others will go to Jerusalem to help rob the Deadwood coach.

"Warriors, I thank you for your kind attention and appreciation. The regular outbreak will begin tomorrow evening at early candle-light. The massacre will open with a song and dance."

The Boom.
[Sacramento Bee.]
Read what the child from Belial has printed in the morning paper:

Tell me not in mournful numbers
That the boom's an empty dream,
For the speculator slumbers
If things are not what they seem.

If we have to beg or borrow,
Though we never hope to pay,
Let us buy, that each tomorrow
Finds us richer than today.

In the boom's broad field of battle, White the speculation's rife, Give the box another rattle— Be a boomster in the strife.

Booms of boomsters all remind us
We can make our boom sublime,
And departing leave behind us Options on the sands of Time.

always have a mental reservation in these matters, which they prefer to the reservation provided by the Government.

Indians naturally dislike to see these lands in the possession of wealthy men whose sons earn a precarious livelihood by playing lawn tennis.

Colorow once made a short speech to his troops, which was taken down at

He wound up by saying that the people of the South love the Union and the Constitution and that it was matter of pride for him to recall that, whether in West Virginia or Massachusetts, he was still in the Union, under the flag of the United States.

He had no sooner retired than Gov. Foraker was again called for. By this time excitement had reached a high pitch. A tremendous crowd had gathered, and as Foraker stepped to the front he was greeted with cheer after cheer.

gathered, and as Toraker stepped to the front he was greeted with cheer after cheer.

He commenced by saying that he had never before, at any one of the many reunions he had attended, heard the words Republican and Democrat used as Gov. Wilson had used them. He had never before heard a word of politics at any reunion or at any meeting of any kind of the members of the G.A.R.

He said their organization was not political and their reunions were not such. There were hundreds of Democratic soldiers present who would so testify. He denied therefore that the soldiers who had come to this reunion had even thought of such a thing as affecting one way or another the politics of the soldiers of West Virginia.
He said that one thing it might be proper to say, however, in view of what had been said, was that the men who wore the blue, whether Democrats or Republicans, did not admit that the right of secession was a political, or any other kind of a question. That it was once a question, but it had been shot to death by the armies of the Republic.

In short, all the questions involved in the war were settled, and settled forever; and we were a unit in our determination to keep them so. In speaking, therefore, of what had been accomplished in settling those questions, we did not regard ourselves as talking politics; and therefore, he did not refer to matters of that kind when he said politics were never discussed at soldiers' reunions or by Grand Army men.

But now polities has been introduced not refer to matters of that kind when he said politics were never discussed at soldiers' reunions or by Grand Army men.

But now politics has been introduced here, and introduced in such a way and by a gentleman of such representative character, that he felt called upon to make answer to what had been said. He then proceeded to make the fur fly. He talked for about one hour, until compelled to quit to take his train home, the audience all the while increasing in size and enthusiasm, until the streets were literally packed in every direction. Almost every sentence called forth ringing applause and the wildest cheering.

It was well said that no such scene was ever witnessed in Wheeling. The Bourbon Democracy got more solid truth than they ever heard before. He reviewed the anti-war questions—the origin of the doctrine of secession, the infance of slavery which it was intended to be betuate—and pointed out the infance and unhallowed character of the contraction whatever, and against the judgment and advice of Alexander H. Stephens and such men, and how by suppression of free speech and by violence and fraud all Union sentiment was drowned out, and State after State was carried into rebellion.

He spoke,too,of how the North had conceded demand after demand made by the South, no matter how unreasonable, in order that peace and union might be maintained, and pictured how Webster and Clay had argued and appealed in vain, but said the only effect of it all seemed to be to cause the South to believe that the people of the North would not fight, and if they did one Southern man could whip five of them. He then described the outbreak of the war, the uprising of the North, the struggles, trials, handships and sacrifice of life and treasure that followed. He graphically portrayed the surrender of Lee, and pointed out how completely broken and helpless the people of the South were and how they had causelessly brought their distress and destitution upon themselves, and then pointed out how generously Grant and the whole Nor then pointed out now generously Grant and the whole North had dealt with them.

We asked nothing more than that they would accept the situation and go home and behave themselves and help in good faith to work out the prosperity and destiny that were in store for us.

He then referred to the enfranchisement of the blacks and the consequent increase of political power, and how, instead of allowing every man to exercise his right of suffrage as he saw fit, they had proceeded to organize Kuthey had proceeded to organize Kuthey solid. He pointed out that all this was in the Democratic party, make the South solid.

He pointed out that all this was in direct violation of the results of the war, and in bad faith; and yet it had been particularly the pointed out that in all the loyal States the parties were both freely and fully irepresented, and every man free to vote his sentiments, while in the South sectionalism existed in its most adious form by reason of the absolute suppression of the Republican party.

He then came down to the present time, and said we were told that because the war had been over twenty years we should not refer to the South as wrong in that struggle. We must have so much consideration for their feelings that we must put our hands on our mouths, and our mouths in the dust and keep silent, while Henry Watterson called the old soldiers a lot of paupers and tramps, and Gen. Sheridan was ordered to keep out of the Shenandoah Valley or bring his respected to the loyal men of the Nation, and if not, why not, when he was so intensely interested in avoiding the prejudice and bitterness of sectionalism.

He then said the soldiers were tramps, however, in the sense that they had tramped across Kentucky down into Tennessee and over the battlements of Donelson. They had tramped during the prejudice and bitterness of sectionalism.

old enough to enlist and be in thirteen battles of the war before he was 19 years old.

Referring to Wilson's eulogy of President Cleveland, and his denunciation of the soldiers for not wanting to march under the banner with his picture on it, he said he was not at all displeased to see the banner, that on the contrary he was greatly pleased to see at least the inscription on the banner, "God Bless the President."

He said he gladly joined in that prayer, and hoped the Almighty would pour out his blessings upon him in the most bountiful manner, and he especially hoped He would bless him with a quickened intelligence, a purified heart, and a higher and more appropriate appreciation than he appeared to have for the services and sacrifices of the brave men who had saved the Government of which he is the head.

Gov. Foraker was compelled to quit speaking to catch the train on which he left for Columbus, but as he did so Gov. Wilson ran to him and warmly shook his hands and wished him a safe journey home, and the vast crowd sent up cheer after cheer as his carriage rolled away.

Wheeling here over Gov. Wilson's wanton assault on Gov. Foraker Friday night, was intensified today by the discovery that Gov. Wilson had purposely absented himself from the carriage to which he was assigned at the head of the G.A.R. procession on Friday. His absence from among the city's distinguished guests on that 'occasion has heretofore been explained by the published statement that the committee forgot him. Today, however, the committee forgot him. Today, however, the committee authorizes the statement that two different carriages called at ex-Gov. Jacobs' residence for Gov. Wilson, where he. was a guest, but, notwithstanding he had been notified that he would be called for, he was not there, and the committees vainly searched for him all over town. The rank discourtesy to the committee has been studiously concealed, until forbearance ceased to be a virtue. Possibly the reducible Windy was hiding with Editor Taney in the cock-loft of the Register, nervously watching the effect of the Democratic conspiracy to make party capital. Another feature, which has not been given the prominence it deserves, is Wilson's uncalled-for assault on ex-President Hayes, Friday night, when he again cracked the frand-of-76 chestnut. This insult to the presiding officer of the gathering did much to incite the bad feeling growing out of Friday night's serenade.

GRAPHIC STORY OF A SAN BER

e Early Reminiscences-A For iorn Hope-Fighting for Life in the Black Cañon of Arizona-Bow and Arrow Against Rifle.

Yesterday morning about a dozen

Majave Indians came into the city from The Needles, and were around the ets selling bows and arrows.

They were standing in a crowd opposite the Bank of San Bernardino when Frank Binkley came down the street, and, seeing them, stopped "dead" in his tracks and began scowling at them. An old resident of the city said to the reporter: "If you will approach the man right he will give you an item that will be interesting, and something that will be copied all over the country."

The newsman was given to understand that Binkley had a long and terrible grudge against Indians of all kinds, and especially the Apaches and Moja ves. They were standing in a crowd oppo kinds, and especially the Apaches and Moja ves:

He went up to Binkley and said:
"Excuse me, but you seem to be interested in those long-haired gentlemen."
"Interested!" said he, turning around as if he had been stabbed in the back.
Well, I should say that I am interested in them. Look here, young fellow, do you see that hole in my face with no eye in it? Well, sir, them there fellows, or their kind, gave me that mark for life."

The reporter became interested him-

"It's a long story," said he, "and one that I had promised myself never to tell to any newspaper, but you have come at me in such a darned polite kind of a way that I bedog if I don't tell you just how the thing came about."

He pulled out a long plug of tobacco and began:

"I had been out in the Black cañon for several weeks, which is about fifteen miles from the town of Prescott, Ariz., and in my prospecting I came across what I considered a pay lead. I went to Prescott and got some of my friends and we started out to look the matter. up more closely, and to work the lead in case it showed up as rich as I thought it would.

The big Indian had dropped his arrows, and when he straightened up to take another draw at me with his bow, I leveled the old girl on him, and for one tooth that he took from me I got four from him. He jumped right up into the air and when he came down there was a good Indian. ne came down there was a good Indian Stewart had laid another out, and at the same time I got a slight, wound in the leg. We realized what kind of a hole we were in, and little things like a bullet-hole through us, just so it left us able to use our arms, was excused. Why, he had dead Indians lying all around him, and still his clothes were full of arrows, and the blood from bullets was running down his legs in perfect streams. "The Indians did not have but few guns, and after the first fire they fell back on their bows and arrows almost entirely. This is where we had the advantage of them. We saw that we must light or die, and every man in the party took his time and determined to make every shot count. Every time an Indian would fall, eight or ten would run away and get down in a rayine that was thirty or forty yards off.

"In a short tine all of the reds were down in the ravine and we began to scatter and protect ourselves as best we could out on the open plain. A remnant of the savages had run our animals off, and we saw that we were in a fine pickle. As I said before, we had to fight or die, and you can bet your life we did fight.

"I can give you a little idea what kind of work was done, when I tell you that Sam Harris was wounded in two places and died in eight days from the lay of the fight; that Scotty was ridled with bullets and shot full of srows, and when the fight ended was mable to move; Fred Hearin got hit had your ground. "At one time during the fight an Indian begun firing at Stewart with his gun, and missing him followed it up with his bow and poisoned arrows. Wall had just fired and had no time to load. He therefore had to run and try to hide. The Indian followed him, and after shooting all of his arrows, he drew his 'tomahawk and stuck it into the back of Wall's head. Hearin saw the work, and having just reloaded while the rest of the brutes were firing at him, he disregarded their bullets and arrows and shot the Indian that was after Wall, in the back of the head and he fell dead.

"Oh, we had a delightful time, and you ask me why I scowl at them there long-haired devils. Say, if ever I catch one of them out in the country with no one to swear against me—well, I will remember the time that they made me and my partners fight for our lives.

"The Indians stayed pretty close to us until we got to dropping one every time we let a gun go off, and then they gradually withdrew.

"As soon as the fight was over, Fred and myself were the only ones that could get about. Sam, Scotty and Stewart lay upon the ground unable to walk. Fred and myself gave the boys some water, and then came the tug of war. We had no horses, and the nearest habitation was miles off. The only thing we could do was to walk the distance and leave the boys in the broiling son until we could get assistance, and as we talked we could see the Indians going away. This gave us courage, and when after an hour we were about to start I saw one of my 'meat' laying sprawled out dead right up to the camp and I said I would like to have his scalp to show the people what I told them was true, and so Fred went over and cut me off the topknot.

"We started out on foot, and in twenty-four hours were back with a crowd of fellows that could clean out the whole plain full of such fighters.

"The boys were found in a terrible condition, but we carried them to Prescott, and all but poor Sam got well. This was nineteen years ago, but, don't you forget it, Stewart and me will never have much love for them there kind of fellows that arerunning around here selling things that came very nearly sending us to the happy hunting ground. Come around to my house some day and I will show you a bullet. It is a little battered, but, if I live long enough, some 'good Indian' will fall down for good some day with it in a vital place in his body. This is the bullet that knocked my eye out and lodged in one of the pack-saddles.

HENRY A. WISE'S BLOODTHIRSTY THOUGHT AND ACT.

Fernando Wood's Appeal to Save the Old Man-But "His Soul Goes Marching On."

Columbus (O.), Aug. 21.—[Special Telegram to the Chicago Inter-Ocean.] The following correspondence will prove very interesting reading, regardless of the fact that it took place many years ago. It is not generally known that the late Fernaudo Wood interested himself in saving John Brown a felon's death, nor is it known that he held Brown less responsible than the late William H. Seward. "John Brown's soul'goes marching on," just the same. New York, Nov. 2, 1859.—My Dear Sir: Read this letter over carefully, and, whether concurring or not, in this view, believe it emanates afrom your friend, and a man who has a thorough knowledge of the pulse of the people of the free States. Your proceedings and conduct thus far, in the matter of the conspiracy at Harper's Ferry meets general approval and elicits commendation from your enimies. The firmness and moderation which has characterized your course cannot but be too highly applauded, and today you stand higher than any other man in the Union. Now, my friend, dare you to do a bold thing and 'temper justice with mercy?' Have you nerve enough to send Brown to the State Prison for life instead of hanging him? Or, rather, I should ask whether such a course would be consistent with your own sense of duty, for I know that that is the sole control of your official conduct. Brown is looked upon here as the mere crazy or foolish emissary of other men. Circumstances create a sympathy for him even with the most ultra friends of the South. I am of this latter class, as by recent speeches you may have observed. No Southern man could go further than myself in behalf of Southern rights; but yet, were I Governor of Virginia, Brown should not be hung, though Seward should be if I could catch him, and in such a course my conduct would be governed by sound policy. The South will gain by showing that it can be Seward should be if I could catch him, and in such a course my conduct would be governed by sound policy. The South will gain by showing that it can be magnanimous to a fanatic in its power. We who fight its battles can gain largely by pointing to such an instance of "chivalry." You can judge of Southern sentiment better than myself; I can judge of Northern sentiment better than you. If the South will sustain such an act, the whole North will rise up en masse to applaud it. I have thus briefly and frankly discharged my duty as your friend, to give advice under trying circumstances. Very truly yours, FERNANDO WOOD.

The obvious answer to that question shows me above anything the necessity The obvious answer to that question shows me above anything the necessity for hanging. You ask, "have you nerve enough to send Brown to State's Prison for life, instead of hanging him?" Yes, if I didn't think he ought to be hung, and that I would be inex-cusable for mitigating his punishment, I could do it without flinching, without a quiver against a universal clamor for his life. But was it ever known before that it would be impol-itic for a State to execute her laws against the highest crimes with-out bringing down way hereal? itic for a State to execute her laws against the highest crimes without bringing down upon herself the vengeance of a public sentiment outside of her limits and hostile to her laws? Is it so that it is wisely said to her that she had better spare a murderer, a robber, a traitor because public sentiment elsewhere glorifies an insurrection with martyrdom? If, so it is time to do execution upon him and all like him. And I therefore say to you, firnly, that I have precisely the nerve enough to let him be executed with the certainty of his condemnation. A Determined Young Woman.

[New York Letter to Indianapolis Journal.]

A daintily clad little woman—she was one of the best operators as well as the prettiest—whom I had noticed several times in a down-town typewriting office, was missing from her desk the other day. The plump, prosperouslooking head of the establishment smoothed down some rebellious reddish-brown locks as she explained, to an accompanying clatter and bang, as if the whole alphabet were out on on a spree. "I didn't expect to keep her long," she said. "She came to me a year ago to learn the business, and her mother—she wore diamonds—came with her, half apologizing for the daughter's whim. The two of them wore gowns that turned the heads of the species office, and locked as if they had money enough and to spare. It turned out when I was in my new apprentice's confidence a little that she was engaged to a law student—an impecunious one—and they wanted to marry as soon as he was admitted to the bar. 'Papa' had absolutely refused his consent, and 'mamma' had frowned on the whole thing. So what does my lady do but get permission, without assigning any reason for the freak, to learn typewriting (she is studying shorthand, too.) having taken the idea into her head that if she and her law student chose to marry when the time came she could support the family until the appearance of some fees. They had the knot tied a couple of days ago, the household powers to the contrary notwithstanding, and are taking a week's holiday somewhere down on the shore. She told me she should be ready for work when she came back, and I think she will. She has been earning $7 a week, and is about expert enough to get $10 now. That will help them out for a while, though I fancy her husband won't leave her here long."

A Positive Proof That Cancer Can Be Cured.

Mr. A. R. Shands is a well-known farmer, whose residence is in Spartanburg, S. C. He is a man of means and education. His standing in his community is A 1 for truth and probity. While Mr. Shands refrains from using the word cancer, the facts he gives settles the question of the nature of his disease. He says his physicians never said the sore was a cancer, but it not they all warned him that there was great danger that it might turn into a cancer. At any rate none of them could afford Mr. Shands the slightest relief, and finally he was cured by S. S. S., the finest and only absolutely certain blood purifier in the world. Below is Mr. Shands own letter about his cure. Let any one suffering from a similar aliment write to Mr. Shands and learn from him the exact effects of the wonderful medicine that cured him.

ine that cured him. Spartanburg, S. C., April 2, 1887. GENTLEMEN: For twenty years I have had a sore on my left cheek. It had gradually been growing worse. The many physicians whom I had consulted were unable to do me any good. Last fall a year ago I began usin S. S. S. At first it inflamed the sore and it be S. S. S. At first it inflamed the sore and it be came more virulent 'han ever; so much so, in deed, that my family insisted that I should leave off the medicine. I persisted in using the S. S. S. At the end of two months the sore was entirely healed. Thinking that the evi was out of my constitution, I left off the med-cine; but in November, ten months after, s icine; but in November, ten months arter, a very slight breaking out appeared. I at once began again on S. S., and now that is also disappearing. I have every faith in S. S. S. It has done me more good than all the doctors and other medicines I ever took.

It is the high-arm pattern, has solf-setting needle; cannot be run backward; has automatic cut-off for driving belt, which prevents it from being run backward, thus avoiding all dangers of breaking thread or needles. It is a noiseless, light-running machine, accompanied by an illustrated book of instructions that makes everything so plain and simple that any lady or child can master it. We call it the MIR-BOR HIGH-ARM SEWING MACHINE, and we warrant it to give full and entire satisfaction in every case, or it may be returned to us within ten days after the subscriber has received the same, if it falls to be as respresented, at our expense, and the money will be refunded.

The above cut represents our HIGH-ARM MIRROR SEWING MACHINE, the very latest improved machine of the high-arm style; a complete embodiment of all the most recent improvements in sewing machine mechanism; a model selected by us after a careful and critical examination and test of the various machines in the market.

Having arranged with the manufacturers to supply us with these machines in large quantities for spot cash at or very near first cost, we can save our subscribers at least $55 on the price of each machine. As this is the first time a sewing machine of this character has been offered to the public at about manufacturer's cost, we feel confident our readers will promptly take advantage of this opportunity to provide themselves with first-class high-arm machines, which obtained in any other way would cost them almost three times the amount.

We could fill several columns expatiating on the merits of this high-arm machine, but to save the reader's patience we will simply say that it contains all the modern improvements, is strong, simple, durable, light-running and noiseless.

OUTFIT—Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: One Hemmer and Feller (one plece), Twelve Needles, Six Bobbins, One Wrench, One Quilting Gauge, One Screw Driver, Oil Can filled with Oil, Gloth Gauge and Thumb-acrew and a Book of Directions. ews of a Blaine Man—Reasons for the Nomination of the Plumed Knight—Severe Arraignment of Cleveland.

[Toledo (O.) Commercial.]
The following is part of a private letter received by one of our citizens from a promiuent business man at San Franisoo:

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 10, 1887.—I have made this letter too long, but permit me to have a few words on politics. Why, of course I am for the Plumed Knight, James G. Blaine, and have not much doubt but he will be the choice of the next Republican convention, and I give my reasons for so thinking.

First—As Cleveland is to be the next Democratic candidate without doubt, that is if he does not commit any serious blunder "in swinging around the circle," which he contemplates taking in September; therefore it is the bounden duty of the Republican party to insist once more that Blaine of all others should lead the Republican hosts, counted out as he was first in the solid South, and then again in New York by a paltry 1100 votes for this same Cleveland.

Second—We have now had two and grounds "that it was uniourous to the provisions of the Constitution. Query, is what constitution?

Second—As Governor of New York, the Supervisors of Chautauqua county were given authority to appropriate money for a soldiers' monument, but Cleveland vetoed the bill.

Third—In 1883, the supply bill contained three items, amounting to $2500, for the relief of three veterans who were disabled while in the service of the State. Cleveland vetoed or struck out the amount on the ground that "they were gratuities or donations which the State was not obliged to make."

Several months before he signed a bill to pay a contractor $10,000 for work on the new capitol. Cornell, his pre-decessor, vetoed a similar bill the year decessor, veloce a similar bill the year previous.

Fourth—In 1883 all the G.A.R. posts of New York petitioned for a law against the fraudulent use of G.A.R. badges. Cleveland vetoed the bill on the ground "that the fines collected from imposters would go to the Grand Army posts".

the ground "that the fines collected from imposters would go to the Grand Army posts."

Fifth—A bill appropriating $10,000 for the "Gettysburg Battle Field Association," to be spent in the erection of suitable monuments to mark the position occupied by the New York troops in the "Battle of Gettysburg." Cleveland vetoed this most proper bill.

Sixth—His persistent vetoes of the pension bills to our disabled soldiers, his vetoes couched in the most part with strained attempts at wit, and retailing partisan charges against the poor soldiers.

Seventh—He approved the order to return the rebel flags, and recalled it when he found that even he was not superior to the law of Congress; he utilized the Fourth of July, our national birthday, by writing the extraordinary letters declining to go to St. Louis because he was afraid of being insulted, if not receiving personal injury at the hands of members of the Grand Army soldiers.

fair idea of the drift of sentiment in California. This gentleman asks: "In it asking too much of Ohio t stan back at this time?" and alleges that "the Great West is very much enthused for James G. Blaine in preference to Sherman." That is a very broad statement and seems to imply that there is, in the West, an antagonism between the friends of Blaine and Sherman. We do not believe this to be a fact. The ideas to these two men on questions of statesmanship are too nearly parallel to leave room for any feeling of bitter hostility from the friends of the one toward the other. Protectionists have little to choose between the two.

friends of the one toward the other. Protectionists have little to choose between the two.

As for Ohio, is she in the habit of "standing back" at any time when her strength is necessary to achieve Republican success? So far from it that if James G. Blaine should be the nominee of the national convention Ohio and John Sherman would be in the foremost rank of his supporters.

If John Sherman should be the nominee, there is no reason to suppose that the Great West and the friends of Blaine everywhere would not be enthused for him as a man whose incumbency of the presidential office would reflect the highest credit and honor upon the Republican party. No one doubts that Blaine would, under such circumstances, exert all his power and influence with a hearty good will to achieve a victory for the Republican party and its nominee.

DAY OUTING.

fty Thousand People Making a Day of it on Hampstead Heath—The Peculiarities and Quaint Features of English Holiday Making.

(London Letter in the New York World.)
Upon four days in the year the banks are closed in Great Britain and business generally is suspended. These days are called bank holidays. The people generally devote these days to pleasure. The dropping of business is much more general than upon any holiday occasion with us. It is almost impossible to get any workingman to do any work within the few days preceding the holiday or directly after it. This last bank holiday, which occurred Monday, August 1st, was the occasion of at least four days' holiday for the general run of working people. Every Saturday afternoon the majority of the shops in London are closed, so the great crowd was set free early last Saturday. They took advantage of the conjunction of Sunday and the bank holiday to go into the country in great crowds. So universal was the departure that the streets of London last Saturday had very much the appearance of Sunday.

she designed the publican party in the control of the state of the sta

Heath there must have been as many more on the River Thames and in its neighborhood. Here was a picture of a different character. The holiday-makers here were of a better class. The scenes presented were brighter, cleaner, and even more picturesque. The young Englishmen of the present day of the well-to-do class are in the main fine physical specimens. They are passionately fond of out-door sports. Thousands of them swarm down upon the river on the occasion of any holiday, where they find an opportunity of rowing their dainty shells up and down the cool shades of the overhanging trees. But they are not always in the shells. You will often see them in heavy barges working their way at the oars, with gayly-dressed ladies reclining on the cushions in the stern, shaded under luxurious, soft. brilliant-hued parasols as they lazily watched the movements of the picturesquely-dressed oarsmen. All of the men on the river wore flannels. Sometimes these flannels are white, but oftener they are striped in fanciful colors. The hats are white flannel or straw. Their dress is very picturesque, and generally in the best taste, but occasionally some young fellow seizes upon this opportunity given him to devise something original in the way of dress. Such a costume I saw yesterday. This dress, which was such a glaring one in point of taste, in contrast with the simplicity of the average athlete of the river, was a combination of red, blue and yellow. His shirt was a pale blue, over which he wore a pink cravat against a high, white collar. His coat was a dull garnet in color, with a coat-of-arms and a monogram worked in gold upon the outside pocket. The trousers were pale yellow, falling over white canvas shoes. His hat, a straw, adorned with sky-blue ribbon. In the rim of the hat, at the back, was a green cord running to the front of his coat. But it is not offen that you find such a combination as this.

It is one of the sights of England to see this merry, free, picturesque life on people you would meet in a conventional way. It is enly out of doors that the English people appear easy or where they appear to take any pleasure in life. In-doors they are solemn, reserved, stiff and awkward. The house-boats on the river are interesting features. These are great, broad barges with real houses built upon them. These houses will have promenade decks, protected by red, blue, or white awnings, according to the fancy of the owner. People who engage these house-boats, which are comfortably fitted up, often live upon the river for days and weeks at a time. Sometimes they will be free from their moorings and put in the tow of some of the steam launches that run up and down the river. I saw one house-boat which is worth a description. It was long, broad and roomy. The house built upon it was of unusual height. Over the back was stretched a snowy white awning. The—boat and house were painted snowy white, picked out in gold. Along the line of the upper deck were great masses of flowers. In front there were great pots of crimson and purple flowers. Under the awning were rugs and easy-chairs. In the front of the boat, on the lower deck, was a square, covered entrance to the house. In this space were seated four or five handsome young women, dressed in—white, light-pink and heliotrope dresses, making a delicate combination against the light background of the house. Sitting in front of them at their feet, upon a soft pile of rugs, was a young, athletic, brown, regular-featured, clean-looking Englishman, playing with great spirit and brilliancy upon a banjo. On the upper deck there were other picturesque groups. From the windows streamed upon the breeze pink silken curtains. This resolendent upon a banjo. On the upper deck there were other picturesque groups. From the windows streamed upon the breeze pink silken curtains. This resplendent boat-house, loaded with youth and beauty, was in the tow of a fanciful, sharp-lined steam launch, which, protected by the red awning, carried also its gay party. From behind the boathouse there were numerous shells and small barges, also in tow, for it is an unwritten law of the river that whenever an oarsman asks for a tow from the happy possessor of steam power that favor is never to be refused.

Shall I Try Journalism? A veteran in Macmillan's Magazine, addressing a youngster on the pursuit of letters in its varied form, says this of newspaper work:

of letters in its varied form, says this of newspaper work:

"If you will take the advice of one who has worn the yoke and escaped from it with feelings of unmixed joy, you will not take service on the daily press. At its best it is slavery; more or less honorable it may be, more or less remunerative, but slavery it is and must be. As for the editors, they, of course, are all honorable men, and some of them can, no doubt, make, and do make matters more agreeable to their bondsthem can, no doubt, make, and do make matters more agreeable to their bondsmen than others. But the editor of a daily paper cannot, by the very reason of his existence, afford to dispense the milk of his human kindness in too liberal a measure. He must be a dictator, and all his men must obey him. An independent writer, one who will not recognize that there are moments when the leopard whiter, one wine will be recognize that there are moments when the leopard not only can but must change his spots, and can find no other total for two and two but four, is as fatal to the staff of a daily newspaper as an independent member of Parliament is fatal to his party. There are no doubt contributions. member of Parliament is fatal to his party. There are, no doubt, contributors whom a sagacious editor will not unduly meddle with; there are subjects and seasons whereon and wherein hemay find it convenient to allow a larger if not complete license. But it can never be safe to count upon these "heaven sent moments" for the exercise of journalistic skill. A veteran will not exact them; an apprentice will almost certainly be disappointed if he does. Let him who is not prepared to place body and soul at the call of his editor keep clear of the daily newspapers, while there is a boot unblackened and a crossing unswept in London.

London.

Let me guard myself against any misconception. I do not wish to declaim. A daily paper must be conducted on these principles or it must cease to exist. An edltor must be a despot—nay, a tyrant. I had never myself the privilege of serving under John Delane, but I know many who had. He was the most tyrannical who ever sat in an editor's chair; but he was a great tyrant, a wise tyrant. "He was created," said one who knew him well. "he was created by heaven to edit the Times."

Before the Rain. The blackcaps pipe among the reeds, And there il be rain to follow; There is a nurmur as of wind In every coign and hollow; The wrens do chatter of their fears While swinging on the barley-ears.

Come, hurry, while there yet is time, Pull up thy scarlet bonnet. Now, sweetheart, as my love is thine, There is a drop upon it. So trip it ere the storm-bag weird Doth pluck the barley by the beard.

Lo! not a whit too soon we're housed;
The storm-witch yells above us;
The branches rapping on the panes
Seem not in truth to love us.
And look where through the clover bush
The nimble-footed rain doth rush!

Says the San Francisco Call: says the San Francisco Call: "Real estate booms leave something behind them in the way of betterments. Lots are graded, walls are built, streets are sewered, houses aye erected, water is introduced. These improvements remain after the boom subsides. They are so much to the good." Yes, and the way to invite and secure a boom is to put the "betterments" in advance of it. If we are correctly informed, Los Angeles and San Diego and Riverside began their improvements before the boom really set in. Indisposition to improve repels the boom. the boom really set in. RECENT CHANGES IN OUTSIDE SAN FRANCISCO LANDS.

meetings are conducted," said Mrs. Elizabeth M. Delescluze a leading Knight of Labor, and one whe is deeply interested in women wage-workers. "I have heard clear and intelligent speeches made at these meetings by girls not more than 18 or 20 years of age when the regular time arrives for a general talk on the subject of labor and all its interests. I have, indeed, been surprised to see how many of these young women understand the scientific principles of society, and of production, consumption and e Future of the City-Facts and the Last Eight Months—

IChronicle, Sept. 1.]

The city never was more prosperous. The outlook for the future never was better. "Boom" is not echoed from every housetop, nor indeed from any locality, but the feeling is universal that the watchword is forward. There is no unnatural excitement in the city. About a week ago quite a flurry was occasioned by several large outside land transactions, and the symptoms of an old-fashioned stock-gambling craze were discernable in many localities, but the wave passed over harmlessly and left city real estate in a perfectly natural condition. The furore of booms on every side of the city is having a natural stimulating effect here. Dealers seem strong in the faith that it is significant of the dawn of a new era; that the State generally will from this time forth take on a new life and that every forward step, regardless of locality, will have a more or less direct influence upon this city as a sort of commercial focus. Statistics verify the fact, too, that the city is rapidly increasing in population, its industries are increasing wonderfully, and with these come the corresponding demand that is the foundation upon which increased values are based.

Just at present attention is turned more generally toward outside lands, these come the corresponding demand that is the foundation upon which increased values are based.

Just at present attention is turned more generally toward outside lands, probably because these offer the main field for speculation; but, however high prices may rise in that direction, business men are firm in the faith that it can only be the forerunner of a great and substantial appreciation of all kinds of property in the very near future. It is regarded now as quite safe to purchase in any locality, some sections, of course, having the preference. Long-headed speculators, who have accumulated their millions by their ability to discern the trend of population and business, are moving about with great activity.

This opinion is shared by all realestate operators. San Francisco cannot remain unmoved in view of all that is going on around it, but the boom, if boom it will be, will stand on a healthy business basis. The city is growing rapidly, and must extend its present residence boundaries. The class of population which furnishes the muscle and sinew of a land, and yet is not rich enought to invest in valuable inside lands, is forced to look elsewhere for homes.

A brief retrospect will give more

A brief retrospect will give more convincing details. It is only a few years since the new City Hall site was a shapeless, migratory sand dune. Market street was a barren waste, and the greater part of the Western Addition a pathless wilderness. It is only a very few years since the first street was laid out in the now delightfully beautiful suburban section designated as Richmond, and all that portion lying between the pan-handle of Golden Gate Park and the Presidio regarded as uninhabitable. Let the unbeliever take a stroll through that country now, and innabitable. Let the unbenever take a stroll through that country now, and remember that not a foot of that comptry ever had a quality more than the present outside lands to redeem it. The gradual and irresistible crowding of the gradual and irresistible crowding of the city's building and residence limits necessitated the encroachments upon the sand. Houses began to spring up here and there out of the sand like beautiful bouquets, and it was found that only moderate industry and perseverence were required to convert the wilderness into a garden of roses.

were required to convert the wilderness into a garden of roses,
San Francisco's population has increased somewhere from 60,000 to 75,-000 in the last ten years. Presuming that this increase will continue for the next ten years at the same rate—and many, are bold enough to predict that the city will double is that time—as in the experience of all large cities, there will be a crowding toward suburban districts. The peculiar formation of San Francisco peninsular is such that there is absolutely no other direction in which to expand, and from sheer necessity the outside lands will have to become the residence portion. The San Francisco charts show that there are about 1200 blocks in the outside district, including the park, cemeteries, race-course, public squares, etc. Some of the blocks abut against the mountain in such a way are to reade districts. The peculiar formation the there is absolutely no other direct in which to expand, and from en ecessity the outside lands will be to become the residence portion. San Francisco charts show that the are about 1200 blocks in the outside district, including the park, cemeles, race-course, public squares, etc. are of the blocks abut against the mardly available for good residence property. Let it be said, then, the sake of illustration, that one of that number is available for pany. Some of the blocks abut against the mountain in such a way as to make them hardly available for good residence property. Let it be said, then, for the sake of illustration, that one-half of that number is available for settlement. In a community not densely settled, it is fair to estimate about 125 population to the block. A very simple calculation reveals, then, that if the population of San Francisco increases in the next ten years as rapidly as it has in the past, nearly the entire tract of outside land can be covered in that time.

A Strong Organization in New York

[New York Mail and Express.]
Twenty thousand women organized!
Where and for what purpose?
In this city of New York, and for self-protection.
Like the Amazons, they are ready to assert and defend their rights, but not as they did—with the sword. This organized body is composed of the working women of the city, led to organize for self-protection by the success attained by workingmen's organizations.
These and other equally interesting facts were obtained to-day by the writer regarding the working women here, what they are doing for themselves, and what is being done for them, through inquiry suggested by a report from Boston that a movement has been quietly projected in labor circles for the organization of women and girls on a trades union basis similar to the existing organization of trades among men. It was learned that here for the past five years the tradeswomen have been quietly organizing until today there are 10,000 of them organized into distinct local assemblies of the Knights of Labor, and that 10,000 more are active members of the local assemblies of the Knights of Labor, and that 10,000 more are active members of the local assemblies composed of and wholly governed by women, there are the dressmakers, who have been organized over four years. Another local assembly is composed of the female carpet-weavers, and has been in existmes over three years. A FINANCIAL PORTRAIT.

The Character of Henry S. Ives, the "Napoleon of Finance," Depicted."

The Character of Henry S. Ives, the "Napoleon of Finance." Depicted." (Chicago Inter-Ocean.]

The financial portrait of Henry S. Ives, as presented by the New York papers, is most startling as well as most shocking in its various aspects. For sensational improbability his career eclipses the adventures of the heroes of Rider Haggard, Ouida, and authors of that ilk whose combined lubricity of expression and ignorance of the actualities and possibilities of life form their chief charm. Yet this young man has removed himself from the realms of fancy and fiction by hisclever appraciation of every sort of mathematical hypotheses. An investigation of his mental and moral stock in trade discovers, first and foremost, an abnormal selfishness, untrammeled by anything resembling honesty of purpose. Shrewdness, suavity of manner, self-control amounting to personal courage, and a rare knowledge of the weaknesses of mankind are evidently coupled in him with a native financial accumen of a very high order.

His ability is as apparent and undeniable as the deplorable lack of uprightness in his business methods. After less than ten years' experience in New York city, only about three years engaged in business on his own responsibility, little more than eighteen months at the head of a private banking-house, and but a few months a member of the New York Stock Exchange, this mere boy of 27 has held Wall street in suspense through a greater part of the summer, and finally made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors showing liabilities and assets reaching into the tens of millions of dollars. Always associating himself with men of standing, and dealing simply in the securities of institutions of unquestioned credit and undoubted solvency, he was enabled to purchase the controlling shares of stock in numerous railways by hypothecating the stock of some corporation previously acquired by naving for a portion of it on account stand the scientific principles of society, and of production, consumption and distribution, and the moral position of women. At first, naturally, it is a difficult thing for them to address such a gathering, not being fluent of speech in such a public position. But they are getting more and more accustomed to that. Men have no part in the formation or management of these assemblies. The women elect a Master Workman from among their own number, who is in some cases called a President. Sometimes the assembly takes a special name, as for instance, the shirt-ironers, who are known also as the "Lady Lockwood Association." Otherwise their meetings and their assemblies generally are conducted the same as those of the men.

"Have you noticed any changes in same as those of the men.

"Have you noticed any changes in the workingwomen since they began to organize in this way?"

"Yes, a wonderful improvement. They are more clear-headed, they think more intelligently, and altogether the educating influence is marked. One fact is particularly noticeable. It is that asperities are smoothed away and that one will admit the opinion of another. THE KEY TO LINCOLN'S TOMB.

A Relic in Possession of E. A. Sherman, of Oakland.

Following is an extract from a letter dated August 18, 1887, from J. C. Power, custodian of the Lincoln monument at Springfield, Ill., to General E. A. Sherman, of Oakland, Commander-in-Chief of the Lincoln Guard of Honor of the United States:

After the attempt to steal the body of Abraham Lincoln, our martyred President, on the night of November 7, 1876, the Lincoln Guard of Honor here safely and secretly secured it, and faithfully kept their secret for nine years, until the final disposition was made on Thursday, April 14th, of the present year, when the remains of Abraham Lincoln and Mary, his wife, were taken to the north vault and there deposited under a brick arch covered with hydraulic cement mixed with small broken rock, which in time will become as hard as adamant, and the sacred dust of our martyred President and his wife safely secured until the resurrection morn.

I send you in this little package the controlling shares of stock in numerous railways by hypothecating the stock of some corporation previously acquired by paying for a portion of it on account and the balance in loans carried by the lives firm. The fresh issues of stock and bonds that each new railway deal permitted, and which invariably resulted in great profit to Ives & Co., gave the house such power that its offers for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad last spring could not be disregarded by Mr. Robert Garrett.

Ives' connection with this celebrated deal and his first notorious and fraudulent manipulation of Mutual Union Telegraph Company stock have been lent manipulation of Mutual Union Telegraph Company stock have been sufficiently aired of late to show the dangerous character of the man and to cause honest men to pause and consider from what soil such a specimen could sprout and flourish. Could a human exotic, such as he, have ever been evolved outside the shadow of Wall street? He is not a moral outgrowth of the fierce and desperate scramble for wealth, which wild speculation always engenders? If he is a legitimate development of certain defined tendencies of business and finance as conducted in the metropolis at the present time, it is well that he should be unmasked and his methods laid open to the world at and his wife safely secured until the resurrection morn.

I send you in this little package the key with which I locked the door to the catacomb of the Lincoln monument when I closed it for the day on the evening of Nov. 7, 1876. The lock was broken by vandals about four hours after I left it. It is here and will be kept by me among the relics in Memorial Hall. The label is not handsome, but I thought that and the key would serve as a bond between us to brighten the chain of friendship and serve as a nucleus around which you could cluster thoughts on the depth of villainy and the exalted patriotism of which the heart is capable. I should have sent it earlier. well that he should be unmasked and his methods laid open to the world at once. . Such marauders are always a menace to the solid and conservative money lenders and capitalists in every city that harbors them. Character and conscience are pretty sure to play more important parts in the conduct of every successful enterprise, both in this and every other city of the country, as the records of such infamous dealings as young Ives' are made public.

Attached to the key is a smooth silver half dollar, upon which is engraved on one side, "Lincoln's Tomb, Nov. 7, 1876. J. C. Power, Custodian," and on the other, "Presented to E. A. Sherman, Feb. 12, 1887," the seventy-eighth anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's hirthday. infamous dealings as young Ives' are made public.

His downfall, therefore, may point a useful lesson here as well as elsewhere, and every business man may gain some helpful information from a thoughtful study between the lines of such subtle plaus for open "financiering." Bradstreet's calls upon the District Attorney of New York in the name of public morality to investigate the transactions of Ives & Co. from the criminal standpoint. In closing a long discussion of this remarkable young person's career, this paper says: Pipes to be Laid Under the Bay of San Francisco.

In closing a long discussion of this remarkable young person's career, this paper says:

Ives, it is to be observed, was not what is called a speculator. Save for his Mutual Union episode he appears to have avoided stock manipulation, and when he suspended his firm had virtually no stock contracts outstanding. He confined himself to what are called investment securities. His partial success was due to his recognition of the ease with which such securities can be borrowed on and manipulated, and it points out to the investor the damages which may be inflicted when the control of a corporation, through its stock, passes into radically unsafe hands. Another feature of the case is the exhibition it gives of the tendency to disregard character and rely upon collateral in the matter of loans. Here was an individual whose character was perfectly known, and whose personal credit would have been more than worthless. The presentation, however, of apparently acceptable collateral, was sufficient to of pipes to the Risdon Iron Works Company.

The pipe in the bay will be so jointed as to allow some movement or "play" of the pipes. The joints are similar to the "ball and socket," allowing movement in any direction. One such line of pipe is laid from Vallejo to Mare Island, and through it courses the water which supplies Mare Island. Similar joints are used in the discharge pipes of the great suction dredgers, one of which was recently in use in East Oakland basin. Work will be begun immediately upon the great construcbeen more than worthless. The presentation, however, of apparently acceptable collateral, was sufficient to procure for him loans amounting to millions of dollars, the possible loss and actual unpleasant situation of the capitalists who were his creditors being mainly due to this disregard of one of the plainest principles of business—that of due regard to the character and antecedents of a borrower.

FERD WARD MORALIZES.

New York, Aug. 23.—Ferdinand Ward was interviewed in Sing Sing prison to-day. "Henry S. Ives' failure." he said, "certainly puts mine far in the shade. Over $16,000,000 was the amount of his liabilities, and it exceeds my total by several millions. His career was remarkable. His rise has been that of a comet, and his fall a hard one, I suppose. District Attorney Martine will try and send him up here, and if any road by which Ives can be forced to travel is in existence, Mr. Martine is just the man to find it, and no mistake. When I went down in a heap," Ward went on to say, changing the subject, "the papers elaborately presented the charge that I had misapplied my mother-in-law's bonds, which had been placed in my, hands for investment. They claimed that I had misapplied over $100,000. The attorney for her visited me the next day and informed me that as a result of careful computation she had received $1500 in excess of the amount which I temporarily controlled. But still I am the despicable scoundrel who would betray the confidence of a relative."
